DO THE RIGHT THING

HOW DEDICATED EMPLOYEES CREATE LOYAL CUSTOMERS AND LARGE PROFITS

JAMES F. PARKER
DO THE RIGHT THING
This page intentionally left blank
DO THE RIGHT THING

How Dedicated Employees Create Loyal Customers and Large Profits

JAMES F. PARKER
To my mom, who taught me, “You’ll catch more flies with honey than with vinegar.”

And to my dad, who sat outside on the steps with the black soldiers who were not allowed to eat at the inside lunch counter during the long bus ride home to Texas after World War II.

Thanks for teaching me to do the right thing.
This page intentionally left blank
Contents

Acknowledgments ....................... xi
About the Author ....................... xiii
Introduction ........................... 1

Chapter 1 Stumbling into the Business World .......................... 5
Chapter 2 9/11 ................................ 9
Chapter 3 The Question Was Answered... ........ 17
Chapter 4 …But I Don’t Want to Be a Corporate Bureaucrat ........ 29
Chapter 5 Getting Off the Ground .................. 33
Chapter 6 The Ten-Minute Turnaround ............ 39
Chapter 7 The Great Texas Whiskey War ........ 47
Chapter 8 I Just Couldn’t Resist ................... 53
Chapter 9 Some of the Obvious Things I Learned ......................... 55
Chapter 10 We’re in What Kind of Business? .... 65 Chapter 11 With a Little Help from Our Competitors... ................. 71
Chapter 12 Leaders Are Everywhere .............. 73
Chapter 13 Great Organizations Have Great Leaders at Every Level ........ 83
Chapter 14  In Case You Didn’t Get It... Great Organizations Have Great Leaders at Every Level ...................... 89
Chapter 15  Great Leaders Make the People Around Them Better ................ 93
Chapter 16  People Recognize a Phony .............. 97
Chapter 17  People Follow a Leader They Trust ......................... 101
Chapter 18  Who Wants the “Best” People? .... 105
Chapter 19  Looking for the Right People ...... 109
Chapter 20  Interview for Attitude ................. 115
Chapter 21  Attitudes Also Matter at 30,000 Feet ...................... 121
Chapter 22  Everybody Remembers Their Interview ....................... 127
Chapter 23  Every Job Affects Others ............. 131
Chapter 24  People Need to Understand Their Mission ...................... 135
Chapter 25  Shared Goals, Shared Knowledge, and Mutual Respect = A Shared Mission ...................... 143
Chapter 26  Do People Think Like Employees or Owners? ..................... 151
Chapter 27  Making Employees Owners .......... 155
Chapter 28  A Sense of Ownership ................. 163
Chapter 29  Make Work Fun ......................... 169
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Chapter</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>30</td>
<td>Build a Customer Service Culture</td>
<td>173</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>31</td>
<td>Everything He Did Was So I Could Come to Work...</td>
<td>177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>32</td>
<td>Fun Can Have a Purpose</td>
<td>181</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>33</td>
<td>Celebrate Success and Achievement</td>
<td>187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>34</td>
<td>Creating Entrepreneurs</td>
<td>189</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>35</td>
<td>Encourage Unconventional Thinking</td>
<td>197</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>36</td>
<td>Suggestion Boxes</td>
<td>207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>37</td>
<td>Many Roads Lead to the Promised Land</td>
<td>209</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>38</td>
<td>Define the Right Goals and Give People Room to Succeed</td>
<td>215</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>39</td>
<td>The Two-Minute Drill</td>
<td>219</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>40</td>
<td>Give People Something to Believe In—Define a Grand Mission</td>
<td>225</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>41</td>
<td>Create a Culture in Which People Want to Do the Right Things</td>
<td>229</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>42</td>
<td>It’s a Family Affair</td>
<td>233</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>43</td>
<td>The Tactics of Success May Vary, but the Principles Are Constant</td>
<td>239</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>44</td>
<td>Be Yourself and Have Some Fun</td>
<td>247</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>45</td>
<td>It’s a Round World</td>
<td>251</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Index</td>
<td>255</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
This page intentionally left blank
Acknowledgments

When people ask me what I am doing these days, since I retired as CEO of Southwest Airlines, I like to tell them that I am trying to avoid work, and it is a full-time job. I guess writing a book should qualify as work, but thanks to the outstanding publishing team at Pearson Education, it was a labor of joy.

I want to express my sincere appreciation to Senior Editor Jennifer Simon for her role in shepherding this first time author through the labyrinthine process of turning thoughts and stories into a book, to Development Editor Russ Hall for helping me find my own voice as an author, to Associate Publisher Amy Neidlinger for her insightful suggestions, and to Anne Goebel and Krista Hansing for their prompt and beneficial refinements of the manuscript. Special thanks go to Publisher Tim Moore, for believing that I had something worthwhile to say, and to author Barry Rosenberg, who initially suggested that I might have a book in me.

The book would not have been possible without the assistance of my longtime executive assistant, Marilyn Strickland, who understands the marvels of modern technology better than I ever will. Thanks for the weekends and evenings you spent on this project, Marilyn. Thanks also to the two good friends who reviewed the manuscript and shared their insights and comments.
Of course, I must also thank the people of Southwest Airlines, who started with a dream and turned it into an airline that changed the world. Thanks for being my inspiration, and for allowing me to be part of your team for 25 wonderful years.

My greatest debt of gratitude goes to my wife and friend, Pat. Thank you for your patience, love, and strength—and for our two wonderful children, James and Jennifer.
James Parker is a lawyer by trade, having received both his undergraduate and law degrees from The University of Texas. After serving as law clerk to a federal judge and as an assistant attorney general of Texas, Jim joined the San Antonio law firm of Oppenheimer, Rosenberg, Kelleher, and Wheatley. As luck would have it, one of the cofounders of that law firm, Herb Kelleher, also cofounded a small Texas airline called Southwest, and Jim soon stumbled into the airline industry. After serving as outside counsel for Southwest for 7 years, Jim became General Counsel for 15 years and ultimately served as Southwest Airlines’ CEO for 3 years, including the period of the 9/11 terrorist attack and its aftermath.

During Jim’s tenure as CEO, Southwest was the only major airline to remain profitable after 9/11. It also became the largest domestic airline in the United States in terms of passenger enplanements, and its market capitalization (the value of its outstanding stock) exceeded that of all other U.S. airlines combined. Southwest was named as the most admired airline and one of the three most admired companies in America by Fortune magazine, Airline of the Year by Air Transport World magazine, and one of the World’s Most Socially Responsible Companies by Global Finance magazine. Jim was also named co-CEO of the Year in 2001 by Morningstar.com and was named to Institutional Investor’s list of Best CEOs in America in 2004.

Jim’s proudest accomplishment, however, comes from the fact that Southwest Airlines was able to protect the jobs of all of its employees, with no furloughs or pay cuts in the aftermath of 9/11, while also remaining profitable every year and, in fact, every quarter during his tenure as CEO. Jim is presently retired from the airline industry and serves on the board of directors of the successful Texas Roadhouse restaurant company. He also serves on the Advisory Council for the MIT Leadership Center. This is his first book.
Most people have a passion for success and creative self expression somewhere deep inside them. They want to be part of something meaningful, to make a contribution, and to find fulfillment in what they do. Sadly, these yearnings are often managed out of people in the unrelenting quest for predictable mediocrity that most organizations pursue. People are seldom encouraged to be themselves, have fun, or seek fulfillment in their jobs. Instead, they are pushed to just do their jobs, meet their quotas, and not make waves. Think outside the box? Proceed at your own peril.

A lot of companies say their employees are their most important asset, but they don’t really mean it. The truth is, they treat employees as depreciable assets, to be used up and then discarded. This is the root cause of the culture of conflict that infects many major corporations today.

You can see the results in any customer service business. When you ask for help at the drug store or hardware store, does the person you ask groan because you interrupted his other duties, or does he cheerfully walk you over to the proper aisle and start telling you about the products you could choose? When the cable guy shows up at your house, does he really care about your business, or does he spend most of his time telling you how lousy the cable company is and that you ought to get satellite?

The truth is that employees who love their jobs will cause customers to love their company. Employees who hate their jobs will make customers hate the company. Quite simply, people who enjoy their work do a better job than people who don’t. And it doesn’t necessarily relate to how much they are paid. From the shop floor to the executive suite, it can fairly be said that the most highly paid people in their professions often do the worst jobs.

The ultimate success of any organization requires consistently excellent performance at every level. Vibrant and successful organizations are not built on a feeling of detachment by employees. Rather, they are built on a culture of engagement, in which employees believe in the mission they are trying to accomplish and know that they are contributing to its success. People who are given the room to succeed usually will.

For 25 years, I had the opportunity to be associated with such a vibrant and successful organization, as outside counsel, then as General Counsel, and finally for three years as CEO of Southwest Airlines. To be sure, I was always thrilled to accept the many honors that were bestowed on our company—Airline of the Year, one of the three most admired companies in America, co-CEO of the year, one of the world’s most socially responsible companies, and so forth. But I never deluded myself into thinking that I had much to do with it. I knew the honors really belonged to our people, who showed their dedication and spirit every day. In fact, in our written communications at Southwest Airlines, we always capitalized the E in Employees, the C in Customers, and the S in Shareholders, to help us remember why we were in business. As the guardian of our corporate culture, President Colleen Barrett was certain to correct anybody who did not show the proper respect for any of these three constituencies in their writing or otherwise.

To those who are looking for a definitive history of Southwest Airlines; or a critical commentary on the brilliant leadership of the company’s legendary cofounder, Herb Kelleher; or what the airline’s business strategy should be from here, this is not your book. Of course, no book that touches on Southwest Airlines can avoid some of the rich stories from its colorful past, or some mention of Herb, but this book is not really about Southwest Airlines. Rather, it is about some of the lessons I learned from working with the people of Southwest Airlines for more than 25 years—mostly frontline workers and employees, whose deeds truly defined the culture for which Southwest Airlines became famous.

The overriding lesson I learned doesn’t involve a lot of management guru buzzwords and acronyms. It is the simplest of principles, which we learned from childhood: When in doubt, just do the right thing. It is still a pretty good rule for doing business, dealing with people, and building successful organizations.
This page intentionally left blank
shortly after the public announcement that I would become Southwest Airlines’ new CEO in June of 2001, I was on one of our planes, flying from San Antonio to Dallas. Once we were in the air and the flight attendants had finished serving their first round of refreshments (yes, you can expect more than one round on Southwest, even on a 55-minute flight), each of the flight attendants stopped by my seat to chat for a moment and wish me well.

The fellow next to me, who looked like a West Texas cowboy, took note of the flight attendants’ comments. After the flight attendants resumed serving and bonding with other customers, the cowboy looked up from his newspaper and asked why the flight attendants all seemed to know me so well.

“Oh, I work at Southwest,” I said. “We’re just kind of like family.”

“I figured that out,” he said. “What do you do there?”
“Well, I’ve been the General Counsel for 15 years, but I just got a promotion.”

Now the cowboy curiously looked me over. “You’re that guy whose picture was in the paper.”

“Yeah, I’m afraid it was in so many papers that my son and daughter want to know if they’ll ever be able to pick up a newspaper without seeing a story about their father in it.”

As I chatted with the cowboy, he filled me in on some of his experiences flying Southwest Airlines. It turned out that he was actually a lawyer from Amarillo who had been flying Southwest for all of the years it had been serving that city. He told me how Southwest had revolutionized his law practice. Suddenly, Amarillo was no longer just an isolated energy and farming town in the Texas Panhandle. He could practice law anywhere in Texas now. He could appear in court in Dallas in the morning, meet a client for lunch in Houston, and attend a State Bar function in Austin in the afternoon—and still get home to sleep in his own bed that night. Besides, he said, flying Southwest was fun. The flights were usually on time, the service was great, the planes were clean, and, best of all, the employees always seemed happy and cheerful. He hated it when he had to fly someplace Southwest didn’t go.

Needless to say, this was all music to my ears, and I took in every word of it. The flight seemed all too short as we made a typical Southwest landing (touch the ground, hit the brakes, push up the thrust reverser, and get to the gate early). As the passengers stepped into the aisle and began to gather their belongings, the cowboy reached into the overhead bin and pulled out his Stetson. He turned to me with a look reflecting an intention to give me some serious advice, and he did.

“You’ve got a hell of a good airline here,” he said. “Don’t screw it up.”

It was a fair comment. As Southwest won customer satisfaction awards time after time, while making consistent profits, researchers and competitors wondered how we did it. People had fun working at Southwest yet worked as hard and efficiently as any group of employees anywhere. Customers loved the airline, and shareholders appreciated the consistent profits. It’s like the company had some “secret sauce” that no other company possessed.

Perhaps there is a grain of truth there. While it may be no secret, there are elements of corporate culture I believe in that are less than obvious. There is no hard formula or mystic process, but there is an honest, no-nonsense way of encouraging leadership up and down the ranks, of respecting each other and sharing human interests, and of hiring and nurturing that leads to a kind of corporate DNA many businesses would like to possess. There is no single pat (or secret) answer, but I’ll be glad to share some of the aspects with you.

As a matter of fact, I’ll try to tell you the whole darn story, so you might as well grab your favorite refreshment and settle in. As you will see, refreshments do play a role in the history of Southwest Airlines. In fact, legend has it that the idea for Southwest was hatched on a cocktail napkin. Our story will show that there is often some serendipity and good fortune to the way certain people handle a crisis or adversity, and some folks manage to do it with a smile. While there is no single formula for success, the goal of this book is to share a few experiences that might be useful, or at least interesting, for people at all levels of any organization.

So here goes. Everything I’m about to tell you is pretty much true.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Index</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ackerman, Debby, 177</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Air California, 201</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Airline Deregulation Act of 1978, 30, 53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>airline industry</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>as commodity business, 65-69</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>deregulation, 30, 53</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>economic impact of</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>September 11 terrorist attacks, 17-28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>history of, 9-11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Southwest Airlines, origins of, 33-38</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ticketless travel, history of, 199-205</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ambrose, Stephen, 103</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>America West, 26</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>American Airlines, 200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>corporate culture, 139-140, 144-145</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>interrelationships of job functions, 135-141</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ancona, Deborah, 89</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>appreciation of good work, 187-188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ATA Airlines, 204</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>attitude, importance of, 109-114. See also corporate culture in hiring process for pilots (Southwest Airlines), 121-126</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>in interviewing job candidates, 115-119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>awards programs, 187-188, 230</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barrett, Colleen, 3, 12, 18, 30, 252</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>benefits package. See compensation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bethune, Gordon, 67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Boeing 737, 56</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>brand value, 71-72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Braniff</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>bankruptcy of, 52</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>competition with Southwest Airlines, 39, 47</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>origins of Southwest Airlines and, 35-38</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>price wars with Southwest Airlines, 47-52</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Bullington, J. D., 252 bureaucracy, 29-30, 189-190
Bush, George H. W., 76
Bush, George W., 76 business ethics. See ethics business model for Southwest Airlines, 65-69

C
CEOs, public perception of, 73-79
Civil Aeronautics Board, 33, 36 coaching analogy (leadership), 219-223 commodity business, airline industry as, 65-69 compensation role in hiring, 111-114
stock options, 155-162 competitive advantage of Southwest Airlines, 71-72
Continental Airlines, 67, 200
Continental Lite, 200 corporate culture. See also attitude; mission statements
customer service culture,
building, 173-175
ethics in, 229-232
inclusion of employees’ families in, 233-238
Southwest Airlines versus American Airlines, 139-140, 144-145
corporate mission commitment to, 143-149
American Airlines
example, 135-141 employee ownership of, 151-154
leadership and, 79-81
creative thinking, encouraging, 197-208
culture. See corporate culture customer satisfaction
as measure of success, 211 in Southwest Airlines, 5, 8 customer service appreciation for good work, 187-188
Dell example, 215-218
principles versus tactics, 239-245
Round World Theory, 251-254
customer service business, Southwest Airlines as, 65-69
customer service culture,
building, 173-175
customers (of Southwest Airlines), response after September 11 terrorist attacks, 23-25

D
D-Day leadership analogy, 83-88
debt level of Southwest Airlines, 61-62
decisions, as exercise of judgement, 209-214 dedication. See pride of employees Dell example, measuring success, 215-218
Dell, Michael, 215-218
Delta, 200
Denison, John, 185, 203
deregulation, 30, 53 distributed leadership, 89-91
Dubinsky, Rick, 160

E
economic impact of September 11 terrorist attacks, 17-28 efficiency of Southwest Airlines, 39-46, 57 Eisenhower, Dwight, 84-85, 101-103 employee recognition programs, 187-188 employees. See also employees (of Southwest Airlines); employees (of United Airlines) customer service culture, building, 173-175 encouraging creative thinking, 197-208
enjoyment of work, 169-172
exercising judgement of, 209-214 families of, inclusion in company culture, 233-238

Round World Theory, 251-254 sense of ownership in company, 163-168 employees (of Southwest Airlines) enjoyment of work, purpose behind, 181-185
hiring practices, 106, 109-114
for pilots, 121-126
importance of, 3
interrelationships of job functions, 131-133
lawyer hiring example, 177-180 ownership of company, 155-157 pride in their work, 151-154 recognition for work, 187-188 response after September 11 terrorist attacks, 25-28 teamwork and efficiency of, 40-46 thinking like entrepreneurs, 189-195 employees (of United Airlines), ownership of company, 157-162
enjoyment of work, 169-172
attaining leadership, 247-249
purpose behind, 181-185
Enron Corporation, 75-78 entrepreneurs, thinking like, 189-195 ethics, in corporate culture, 229-232 expectations, conveying during job interview, 127-130 experience, role in hiring, 110-111

F
families of employees, inclusion in company culture, 233-238 fare structure changes at Southwest Airlines, 47-52
Fastow, Andrew, 77
Financial Accounting Standards Board, 229 flight, history of, 9-11
Franklin, Bill, 40-42 front line leadership, importance of, 80-81, 89-91 Frontier Airlines, 201
fun. See enjoyment of work

G–H
Gates, Bill, 74
Gittell, Jody Hoffer, 138, 143, 149 goals. See measuring success
Golden Rule, 251-254
Golden, Mike, 202-205
Goodwin, Jim, 162

Halloween celebrations at Southwest Airlines, 183-185
Hart, G. J., 243
Health South, 78
hiring practices, 105-107
interviewing job candidates, 115-119
expectations conveyed during, 127-130
lawyer hiring example, 177-180
at Southwest Airlines, 109-114
for pilots, 121-126
history of airline industry, 9-11 of Southwest Airlines, 33-38
of ticketless travel, 199-205
Hitler, Adolph, 84, 87-88
Howdy’s, 181, 183
hub-and-spoke route system, 58-60
Huntsman, Jon, 232

I–J interrelationships of job functions, 131-133, 143-149
American Airlines example, 135-141
interviewing job candidates, 115-119
expectations conveyed during, 127-130
JetBlue Airlines, 203 job functions, interrelationships of, 131-133, 143-149
  American Airlines example, 135-141
job interviews. See interviewing job candidates jobs, missions versus, 225 judgment, exercising, 209-214

K–L
Kelleher, Herb, 3, 22, 27, 30-35, 54, 74, 204
King, Martin Luther, 180
King, Rollin, 34-35
Knight, Bobby, 220
Kozlowski, Dennis, 78
Kraft, Bob, 167
Krzyzewski, Mike, 220
Lasorda, Tommy, 93
lawyer hiring example, 177-180
Lay, Ken, 76-77
leadership attaining, 247-249
  avoiding phoniness in, 97-99 coaching analogy, 219-223 definition of, 222
  distributed leadership, 89-91
  Eisenhower example, 101-103
  importance of, 73-81
  qualities of, 93-96
  World War II analogy, 83-88 litigation, in origins of Southwest Airlines, 35-38

M
Malone, Tom, 213
McCartney, Scott, 143, 145
measuring success, 209-214
  Dell example, 215-218
Midway Airlines, 19, 201
Miller, Wilbur K., 38 mission statements, 225-227.
  See also corporate mission missions, jobs versus, 225
Montgomery, Bob, 195
Morris Air, 203
Muse, Lamar, 37, 51

N–O
Neel, Debbie, 177
Neeleman, David, 203
New England Patriots, 167
Normandy invasion leadership analogy, 83-88
Northwest Airlines, 200 on time performance, as measure of success, 211 operational excellence of Southwest Airlines, 62
Oppenheimer, David, 177
Oppenheimer, Rosenberg, Kelleher & Wheatley law firm, 31, 177 organizational culture. See corporate culture
Index

origins. See history Ortiz, Steve, 234-235, 243 ownership of corporate mission, 151-154 by employees
    Southwest Airlines, 155-157
    United Airlines, 157-162
employees’ sense of, 163-168
Ozark Airlines, 201, 253

P parties at work, purpose of, 181-185 past conduct, questions about during job interviews, 116 people. See also employees enjoyment of work, 169-172
    purpose behind, 181-185
  hiring practices, 105-107
    at Southwest Airlines, 109-114
  interviewing job candidates, 115-119, 127-130
  pride in their work, 151-154
  performance, interrelationships of job functions, 131-133, 143-149 American Airlines example, 135-141
  phoniness in leadership, avoiding, 97-99
  Piedmont Airlines, 201 pilots, hiring process at Southwest Airlines, 121-126
  point-to-point route system, 58-60 price, as part of value, 71-72 price wars, Southwest Airlines versus Braniff, 47-52 pride of employees, 151-154 principles, tactics versus, 233, 239-245 profit-sharing plans, 155-156 profitability, as measure of success, 210
  PSA (California intrastate airline), 34, 201

Q–R qualities of leadership, 93-96 quality, as part of value, 71-72
  Ramirez, Pete, 32 recognition for good work, 187-188 relational coordination, 139, 143, 149 respect, in leadership, 95-99
  Ricks, Ron, 182, 185
  Rommel, Erwin, 88
  Roosevelt, Franklin D., 84
  Roosevelt, Theodore Jr., 86
  Round World Theory, 251-254 route systems, hub-and-spoke versus point-to-point, 58-60 rules, ethics and, 229-230
Rundstedt, Karl R. G. von, 88
Ruppel, Jim, 18, 187

S safety record, as measure of success, 211 salary. See compensation
Sarbanes-Oxley Act, 229
September 11 terrorist attacks, 9-15 economic impact of, 17-28
shareholders (of Southwest Airlines), response after September 11 terrorist attacks, 25 silo mentality, 209 simplicity of Southwest Airlines, 60-61
Skilling, Jeff, 77
Southwest Airlines. See also employees (of Southwest Airlines) Airline Deregulation Act of 1978, effect of, 30 awards of, 230
brand value, 71-72
business model, 65-69
corporate culture, American Airlines culture versus, 139-140, 144-145
customer satisfaction, 5, 8 debt level of, 61-62
economic impact of September 11 terrorist attacks, 17-28 efficiency and teamwork of, 39-46, 57 employee ownership, 155-157 employees’ sense of ownership, 166-168
encouraging creative thinking, 199-205
enjoyment of work, purpose behind, 181-185
ethics of, 229 exercising judgment, 212-214 fare structure changes, 47-52
hiring practices, 109-114
lawyer hiring example, 177-180
for pilots, 121-126
honors for, 2
inclusion of employees’ families in company culture, 236-238 keys to success, 55-63 mission statement, 225-227 operational excellence of, 62 origins of, 33-38 people, importance of, 3
point-to-point route system, 58-60
principles versus tactics, 244-245
Round World Theory, 251-254
during September 11
terrorist attacks, 11-15
simplicity of, 60-61
The Southwest Airlines Way
(Gittell), 138
Spears, Dave, 191-195
sports analogy (leadership), 219-223
stability in business, 29-30
stock options, 155-162
success measuring, 209-214
Dell example, 215-218
of Southwest Airlines, keys to, 55-63 suggestion boxes, 207-208
Summitt, Pat, 220

T
tactics, principles versus, 233, 239-245
Taylor, Kent, 233, 242-243 teamwork
importance of, 143-149
sense of ownership and, 163-168
of Southwest Airlines, 39-46, 57
terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001,
9-15
economic impact of, 17-28
Texas Aeronautics Commission, 35
Texas International Airlines competition with Southwest Airlines, 39, 47

conviction for antitrust violations, 52
origins of Southwest
Airlines and, 33-38
Texas Roadhouse, 233-236
principles versus tactics, 239-244
The Three Amigos (film), 185 ticketless travel, history of, 199-205
Ticketmaster, 180
trust, in leadership, 95-103
TWA, 200
two-minute drill analogy (leadership), 219-223
Tyco, 78

U–V
unconventional thinking, encouraging, 197-208
United Airlines, 200
employee ownership,
157-162
United Shuttle, 200
US Airways, 161, 200 value, as price and quality combination, 71-72
The Victors—Eisenhower and His Boys: The Men of World War II
(Ambrose), 103
von Luck, Hans, 88

W–Z
Walton, Sam, 75
Welch, Jack, 74
Western Airlines, 201
Index

whistleblower protections, 229
Williams, Ted, 93
Wilson, Charles E., 30 wind tunnels, invention of, 10

Winners Never Cheat
  (Huntsman), 232
Woodruff, Paul, 230, 232 work enjoyment of, 169-172
  attaining leadership, 247-249
  purpose behind, 181-185
  recognition for, 187-188
World War II leadership analogy, 83-88
Worldcom, 78
Wright, Orville and Wilbur, 9