

Analytics Across the Enterprise

How IBM Realizes Business Value
from Big Data and Analytics

Brenda L. Dietrich • Emily C. Plachy • Maureen F. Norton

Foreword by Linda S. Sanford

Senior Vice President, Enterprise Transformation, IBM Corporation

FREE SAMPLE CHAPTER

SHARE WITH OTHERS

Related Books of Interest

Patterns of Information Management

By Mandy Chessell and Harald C. Smith
ISBN: 978-0-13-315550-1

Use Best Practice Patterns to Understand and Architect Manageable, Efficient Information Supply Chains That Help You Leverage All Your Data and Knowledge

Building on the analogy of a supply chain, Mandy Chessell and Harald Smith explain how information can be transformed, enriched, reconciled, redistributed, and utilized in even the most complex environments.

Through a realistic, end-to-end case study, they help you blend overlapping information management, SOA, and BPM technologies that are often viewed as competitive.

Using this book's patterns, you can integrate all levels of your architecture—from holistic, enterprise, system-level views down to low-level design elements. You can fully address key non-functional requirements such as the amount, quality, and pace of incoming data. Above all, you can create an IT landscape that is coherent, interconnected, efficient, effective, and manageable.

The Business of IT How to Improve Service and Lower Costs

By Robert Ryan and Tim Raducha-Grace
ISBN: 978-0-13-700061-6

Drive More Business Value from IT...and Bridge the Gap Between IT and Business Leadership

IT organizations have achieved outstanding technological maturity, but many have been slower to adopt world-class business practices. This book provides IT and business executives with methods to achieve greater business discipline throughout IT, collaborate more effectively, sharpen focus on the customer, and drive greater value from IT investment. Drawing on their experience consulting with leading IT organizations, Robert Ryan and Tim Raducha-Grace help IT leaders make sense of alternative ways to improve IT service and lower cost, including ITIL, IT financial management, balanced scorecards, and business cases. You'll learn how to choose the best approaches to improve IT business practices for your environment and use these practices to improve service quality, reduce costs, and drive top-line revenue growth.

Related Books of Interest

The Art of Enterprise Information Architecture A Systems-Based Approach for Unlocking Business Insight

By Mario Godinez, Eberhard Hechler, Klaus Koenig, Steve Lockwood, Martin Oberhofer, and Michael Schroeck

ISBN: 978-0-13-703571-7

Architecture for the Intelligent Enterprise: Powerful New Ways to Maximize the Real-Time Value of Information

Tomorrow's winning "Intelligent Enterprises" will bring together far more diverse sources of data, analyze it in more powerful ways, and deliver immediate insight to decision-makers throughout the organization. Today, however, most companies fail to apply the information they already have, while struggling with the complexity and costs of their existing information environments.

In this book, a team of IBM's leading information management experts guide you on a journey that will take you from where you are today toward becoming an "Intelligent Enterprise."

The New Era of Enterprise Business Intelligence: Using Analytics to Achieve a Global Competitive Advantage

By Mike Biere

ISBN: 978-0-13-707542-3

A Complete Blueprint for Maximizing the Value of Business Intelligence in the Enterprise

The typical enterprise recognizes the immense potential of business intelligence (BI) and its impact upon many facets within the organization—but it's not easy to transform BI's potential into real business value. Top BI expert Mike Biere presents a complete blueprint for creating winning BI strategies and infrastructure and systematically maximizing the value of information throughout the enterprise.

This product-independent guide brings together start-to-finish guidance and practical checklists for every senior IT executive, planner, strategist, implementer, and the actual business users themselves.

Listen to the author's podcast at:
ibmpressbooks.com/podcasts

Related Books of Interest

Enterprise Master Data Management

An SOA Approach to Managing Core Information

By Allen Dreibelbis, Eberhard Hechler, Ivan Milman, Martin Oberhofer, Paul Van Run, and Dan Wolfson
ISBN: 978-0-13-236625-0

The Only Complete Technical Primer for MDM Planners, Architects, and Implementers

Enterprise Master Data Management provides an authoritative, vendor-independent MDM technical reference for practitioners: architects, technical analysts, consultants, solution designers, and senior IT decision makers. Written by the IBM® data management innovators who are pioneering MDM, this book systematically introduces MDM's key concepts and technical themes, explains its business case, and illuminates how it interrelates with and enables SOA.

Drawing on their experience with cutting-edge projects, the authors introduce MDM patterns, blueprints, solutions, and best practices published nowhere else—everything you need to establish a consistent, manageable set of master data, and use it for competitive advantage.

Mining the Talk

Unlocking the Business Value in Unstructured Information

Spangler, Kreulen

ISBN: 978-0-13-233953-7

Decision Management Systems

A Practical Guide to Using Business Rules and Predictive Analytics Taylor

ISBN: 978-0-13-288438-9

IBM Cognos Business Intelligence v10

The Complete Guide
Gautam

ISBN: 978-0-13-272472-2

IBM Cognos 10 Report Studio

Practical Examples
Draskovic, Johnson

ISBN: 978-0-13-265675-7

Data Integration Blueprint and Modeling

Techniques for a Scalable and Sustainable Architecture

Giordano

ISBN: 978-0-13-708493-7

Praise for Analytics Across the Enterprise

“Few major high-tech companies eat their own dog food. But give IBM credit: It practices what it preaches. This book provides an inside look at how IBM has applied analytics to nine business functions, the lessons it has learned, and the value it has derived. This book is valuable for anyone in a large company who wants to know how to apply analytics profitably.”

—Wayne Eckerson, Principal Consultant, Eckerson Group, and author, Secrets of Analytical Leaders: Insights from Information Insiders

“Analytics Across the Enterprise shows how even the most complex enterprise can transform itself with analytics. A powerful collection of real-world projects shows that using analytics to improve decisions, especially operational decisions, drives efficiency and innovation. The stories in this very readable book show the importance of actually taking action, not just developing insight; of caring about the end user context, not just the model; of gaining buy-in and managing organizational change; and much more. A great guide for anyone transforming their own organization with analytics.”

—James Taylor, author, Decision Management Systems: A Practical Guide to Using Business Rules and Predictive Analytics (IBM Press)

“Analytics Across the Enterprise is the only book on analytics written by three world-class experts ‘standing on the shoulders of a giant’ analytics powerhouse: an impressive first-hand account of nine breakthrough analytic journeys from 70 top executives and practitioners, the largest private math department in the world, and a leading consulting think tank. This is an unprecedented tour de force showing how a best-of-breed analytics company revolutionized its own business model.”

—Gonçalo Pacheco de Almeida, Associate Professor of Strategy, Head of the Business Analytics Initiative, and Academic Director of the MBA Strategy Specialization, HEC Paris Business School and the French National Scientific Research Center—HEC Lab

“A thoughtfully written collection of stories from within IBM, with proven techniques that are valuable for all current and future business leaders. IBM has been doing analytics since before it was ‘cool’ and, for the first time, shares an inside look at the very pragmatic, inspiring approach complete with lessons learned. Analytics Across the Enterprise not only changes the game, it explains how to win.”

—Lawrence G. Singleton, PhD, CPA, Dean, School of Management, Professor of Accounting and International Business, Marist College

“Organizations are awash in data. Many have transformed this data into information, yet few have identified patterns of insight from this information. A rare number of organizations can take the insight to action, but even fewer can create a pathway from data to decisions. In Analytics Across the Enterprise, Dietrich, Plachy, and Norton definitively chronicle what it takes to apply big data and analytics in the transformation of enterprises. The results: Successful leaders create competitive advantage in smarter workforces, optimized supply chains, and predictable sales performance. Organizations will learn how to move not only from gut-feel intuition but also to powerful fact-based decision making.”

—R “Ray” Wang, Principal Analyst and Founder, Constellation Research, Inc.

“The growing demand for analytics is a priority for business and IT to collaborate on the processes and technology required to gain the insights to guide organizations to be effective. This book helps organizations gain a perspective on what operating analytics across the enterprise is all about and most importantly why it is crucial across lines of business where the outcomes can be achieved from making continuous investments.”

—Mark Smith, CEO and Chief Research Officer, Ventana Research

“Glimpses of the IBM vision of the future for analytics have regularly appeared in the literature, and now for the first time we have a comprehensive inside account of how IBM uses advanced analytics to compete globally. Using examples from many functions (HR, marketing, finance, supply chain), this book provides a fascinating view of IBM as an intensively data-driven corporation. Senior executives familiar with analytics and data applications will find many ideas in this book on how they can harness analytics to improve their corporation’s performance. Executives less familiar with analytics may experience some ‘shock and awe’ in reading how far data- and analytics-driven corporations have progressed and what formidable competitors they have become.”

—Peter C. Bell, Professor, Management Science, Ivey Business School at Western University

“Analytics Across the Enterprise is a live chronicle of how the practice of analytics transcends the business functional boundaries and how it benefits all the business functions.”

—Dr. Adam Fadlalla, Associate Dean for Academic Affairs and Professor of Information Systems, College of Business and Economics, Qatar University

“The use of data and analytics to generate value is a journey for all organizations: a journey of technology, operational self-awareness, and culture. The joy and challenge of data and analytics is that it is difficult, and as such, it is a source of sustainable competitive value. This book tells the story of the journey of adoption of analytics for IBM and how we became a company driven by data and analytics. It explores the technical and mathematical complexities of the journey, the different business use cases, and the value it delivered to our clients, our employees, and our shareholders.”

—Fred Balboni, Global Managing Partner, Strategy and Analytics, Global Business Services, IBM Corporation

Analytics Across the Enterprise

This page intentionally left blank

Analytics Across the Enterprise

How IBM Realizes Business Value
from Big Data and Analytics

Brenda L. Dietrich, Emily C. Plachy, and Maureen F. Norton

IBM Press Pearson plc

Upper Saddle River, NJ • Boston • Indianapolis • San Francisco
New York • Toronto • Montreal • London • Munich • Paris • Madrid Cape Town • Sydney • Tokyo • Singapore • Mexico City

ibmpressbooks.com

The authors and publisher have taken care in the preparation of this book, but make no expressed or implied warranty of any kind and assume no responsibility for errors or omissions. No liability is assumed for incidental or consequential damages in connection with or arising out of the use of the information or programs contained herein.

© Copyright 2014 by International Business Machines Corporation. All rights reserved.

Note to U.S. Government Users: Documentation related to restricted right. Use, duplication, or disclosure is subject to restrictions set forth in GSA ADP Schedule Contract with IBM Corporation.

IBM Press Program Managers: Steven M. Stansel, Ellice Uffer

Cover design: IBM Corporation

Associate Publisher: Dave Dusthimer

Marketing Manager: Stephane Nakib

Executive Editor: Mary Beth Ray

Publicist: Heather Fox

Development Editor: Allison Beaumont Johnson

Technical Editors: John Lucas, Ken Sloan

Managing Editor: Kristy Hart

Designer: Alan Clements

Senior Project Editor: Betsy Gratner

Copy Editor: Kitty Wilson

Indexer: WordWise Publishing Services

Compositor: Nonie Ratcliff

Proofreader: Debbie Williams

Manufacturing Buyer: Dan Uhrig

Published by Pearson plc

Publishing as IBM Press

For information about buying this title in bulk quantities, or for special sales opportunities (which may include electronic versions; custom cover designs; and content particular to your business, training goals, marketing focus, or branding interests), please contact our corporate sales department at corpsales@pearsoned.com or (800) 382-3419.

For government sales inquiries, please contact governmentsales@pearsoned.com.

For questions about sales outside the U.S., please contact international@pearsoned.com.

The following terms are trademarks of International Business Machines Corporation in many jurisdictions worldwide: IBM, IBM Press, IBM Watson, Global Business Services, Smarter Planet, Smarter Commerce, System p, Cognos, TM1, SPSS, QRadar, Q1 Labs, IBM Social Business, Smarter Cities, PureSystems, ILOG, WebSphere, DB2, Global Technology Services, and DemandTec. Kenexa is a registered trademark of Kenexa, an IBM Company. Other product and service names might be trademarks of IBM or other companies. A current list of IBM trademarks is available on the Web at www.ibm.com/legal/copytrade.shtml.

UNIX is a registered trademark of The Open Group in the United States and other countries. Intel, Intel logo, Intel Inside, Intel Inside logo, Intel Centrino, Intel Centrino logo, Celeron, Intel Xeon, Intel SpeedStep, Itanium, and Pentium are trademarks or registered trademarks of Intel Corporation or its subsidiaries in the United States and other countries. Other company, product, or service names may be trademarks or service marks of others.

Library of Congress Control Number: 2014934177

All rights reserved. This publication is protected by copyright, and permission must be obtained from the publisher prior to any prohibited reproduction, storage in a retrieval system, or transmission in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or likewise. For information regarding permissions, write to:

Pearson Education, Inc.
Rights and Contracts Department 501 Boylston Street, Suite 900
Boston, MA 02116
Fax (617) 671-3447

ISBN-13: 978-0-13-383303-4
ISBN-10: 0-13-383303-8

Text printed in the United States on recycled paper at R.R. Donnelley in Crawfordsville, Indiana.

Second Printing: August 2014

For the many pioneers at IBM who are breaking new ground to realize business value from big data and analytics.

Contents

Foreword xix

Preface xxi

Chapter 1 ■ Why Big Data and Analytics? 1

Why IBM Started an Enterprise-Wide Journey to Use Analytics 3

Big Data and Analytics Demystified 4

Descriptive and Predictive Analytics 5

Prescriptive Analytics 6

Social Media Analytics 6

Entity Analytics 7

Cognitive Computing 7

Big Data 8

Why Analytics Matters 9

Governance 10

Proven Approaches 12

Gauging Progress 13

Overview of Nine Journeys 14

Emerging Themes 15

How to Use This Book 17

Endnotes 18

Chapter 2	■	Creating a Smarter Workforce	21
		Perspective: Applying Analytics to the Workforce	21
		Challenge: Retaining High-Value Resources in Growth Markets	25
		Outcome: Attrition Rate Declined; Net Benefits Exceeded Expectations	26
		Challenge: Gaining an Accurate View of What Employees Are Thinking	26
		Outcome: Ability to Act on Real Insights About Employees	27
		Lessons Learned	29
		Endnotes	31
Chapter 3	■	Optimizing the Supply Chain	33
		Perspective: Applying Analytics to the Supply Chain	33
		Challenge: Detecting Quality Problems Early	36
		Outcome: Significant Cost Savings, Improved Productivity, Improved Brand Value, and Two Awards	38
		Challenge: Providing Supply/Demand Visibility and Improved Channel Inventory Management	39
		Outcome: Reduced Price Protection Expense, Reduced Returns, and Two Industry Awards	41
		Challenge: Improving the Accounts Receivable Business Process and Collector Productivity	41
		Outcome: Better Visibility to Track the Total Receivables View Across the Entire Collection Process and Reduction in Labor Cost	43
		Challenge: Predicting Disruptions in the Supply Chain	43
		Outcome: Number of Listening Events Increased Tenfold and Local Language Listening Proved Valuable	44
		Lessons Learned	45
		Endnotes	48
Chapter 4	■	Anticipating the Financial Future	51
		Perspective: Big Data and Analytics Increase Value of Finance Team	51
		Getting the Basics in Place	52
		Creating an Analytics Culture	53

Challenge: Improving Efficiency and Effectiveness of Managing Worldwide Spending 55

Tracking Spending: The Worldwide Spend Project 55

Outcome: More Efficient and More Effective Spend Forecasting 57

Keeping Up with Reporting Requirements: The Accelerated External Reporting (AER) System 58

Outcome: Improved Statutory and Tax Reporting and Analytics 59

Challenge: Balancing Risk and Reward 59

Assessing Risk: Country Financial Risk Scorecard 59

Outcome: Country Financial Risk Scorecard Uses Big Data to Monitor Trends and Minimize Risk 61

Challenge: Validating Acquisition Strategy 62

Managing M & A: The Mergers and Acquisitions Analytics Project 62

Outcome: Mergers and Acquisitions Analytics Improves Success Rate 62

The Smarter Enterprise Enablement (SEE) Initiative 64

Outcome: SEE Project Transforms Strategic Planning and Its Novel Approach Leads to Patent Applications 64

What's Next for IBM Finance? 64

Lessons Learned 65

Endnotes 66

Chapter 5 n Enabling Analytics Through Information Technology 67

Perspective: Applying Analytics to IT and Enabling Big Data and Analytics Across an Enterprise 67

Challenge: Deciding When to Modernize Servers 69

Outcome: Increase in Application Availability 70

Challenge: Detecting Security Incidents 71

Outcome: Increased Detection of Security Incidents 71

Enabling the Transformation to a Smarter Enterprise 71

Developing Enterprise-Wide Big Data and Analytics Applications 71

Partnering with Business Areas to Develop Social Media Analytic Solutions for Customer-Centric Outcomes 73

Developing an Information Agenda and Processes for Governance and Security of Data 73

Providing a Big Data and Analytics Infrastructure 76

Lessons Learned 77

Endnotes 78

Chapter 6 ■ Reaching Your Market 81

Perspective: Using Analytics to Reach and Engage with Clients 81

A Signature Client Experience 83

Marketing-Related Analytics Hiring Soaring 84

Agility Is Key 84

Challenge: Developing the Data Foundation and Analytics Capability to Enable a Signature Client Experience 85

Outcome: Individual Data Master to Provide Client-Level Insights 87

Challenge: Providing a Real-Time View into Effectiveness of Marketing Actions: Performance Management 87

Outcome: Marketing Efficiencies Realized and Transformation of Marketing Enabled 88

Challenge: Going Beyond Correlation to Determine Causal Effects of Marketing Actions 90

Outcome: System Deals with Special Terms and Conditions Added Grew from 67% to 98% over Three Quarters 90

Challenge: Tapping into Analytics Passion to Provide New Insights to Inform IBM's Digital Strategy 92

Outcome: Insights from Diverse Teams Provided the Evidence Needed to Make Changes to the Digital Strategy 93

Lessons Learned 94

Endnotes 94

Chapter 7 ■ Measuring the Immeasurable 97

Perspective: Software Development Organization Optimizes the Highly Skilled Workforce 97

Challenge: Creating a Common View of Development Expense to Enable Decision Making 99

Development Expense Baseline Project 99

Outcome: Development Expense Baseline Project Proves That the Immeasurable Can Be Measured 105

Lessons Learned 105

Endnotes 106

Chapter 8	■	Optimizing Manufacturing	107
		Perspective: Applying Analytics to Manufacturing and Product Management	107
		Challenge: Scheduling a Complex Manufacturing Process in a Semiconductor Fab	108
		Outcome: Reduced Production Times	111
		Challenge: Enhancing Yield in the Manufacturing of Semiconductors	111
		Outcome: Cost Savings Due to Yield Improvement	112
		Challenge: Reducing the Time to Detect Aberrant Events	113
		Outcome: Engineers Take Action	114
		Challenge: Simplifying the Hardware Product Portfolio	115
		Outcome: Significant Reduction of Hardware Product Portfolio	116
		Lessons Learned	117
		Endnotes	117
Chapter 9	■	Increasing Sales Performance	121
		Perspective: Using Analytics to Optimize Sales Performance—Inside and Out	121
		How IBM Approached Leveraging Analytics in Sales Organizations	122
		Using Analytics to Build a Business Case for Inside Sales	123
		Challenge: Deploying Sellers for Maximum Revenue Growth by Account	124
		Outcome: Increased Sales Performance	126
		Challenge: Deploying Sellers Within a Territory	126
		Outcome: Increased Territory Performance	127
		Challenge: Determining the Optimal Sales Coverage Investment by Account	128
		Outcome: Increased Revenue and Increased Productivity	130
		Online Commerce	130
		Challenge: Creating a Smarter Commerce B2B Solution to Drive Cross-Company Efficiencies	132
		Outcome: An Analytics-Based, Client-Focused Business Case Wins Approval	133

	Lessons Learned	135
	Endnotes	137
Chapter 10 ■	Delivering Services with Excellence	139
	Perspective: Leveraging Analytics in a Services Business	139
	Challenge: Developing New Business	141
	Outcome: Increased Signings, Revenue, and Pipeline	142
	Challenge: Predicting Risk of Contracts	142
	Outcome: Deployment of Financial Risk Analytics	143
	Challenge: Optimizing Workforce Performance	143
	Outcome: Large Cost Savings, Improved Productivity, and Faster Client Response Times	147
	Challenge: Getting Early Warning About Problems	147
	Outcome: Timely Intelligence to Delivery Teams to Help Satisfy Clients	148
	Lessons Learned	148
	Endnotes	149
Chapter 11 ■	Reflections and a Look to the Future	151
	The Journey Continues	151
	Reflections	153
	Transactional Data	155
	Simulation	156
	Alerts	157
	Forecasting	158
	The Future	159
	Growth of Data	160
	Unstructured Data	161
	Cognitive Computing	163
	Endnotes	164
Appendix A ■	Big Data and Analytics Use Cases	165
Glossary ■	Acronyms and Definitions of Key Big Data and Analytics Terms	175
	Index	183

Foreword

Like many of our clients, IBM® itself is focused on becoming a smarter enterprise. Connected people, integrated processes, and instrumented data: These form the foundation for “smarter.” A smarter enterprise makes decisions differently, creates value differently, and delivers value differently...and it all starts with the creative application of analytics.

In my conversations with clients about transformation, they often ask how IBM has approached analytics. Where should we get started? What are you doing inside IBM? What advice would you offer from your experience so far?

To help answer these questions for clients, our analytics practitioners inside IBM collaborated to develop this book. IBM has moved aggressively the past several years to build our analytics capabilities—through hiring talent, developing software, and acquiring firms with analytics tools that enhance our portfolio. IBM itself has been the alpha and beta for the deployment of these new technologies across our operations—from how we manage finance and marketing to how we optimize our supply chain and attract, retain, and develop talent. Indeed, we’ve found that in virtually every aspect of your organization, you can make smarter, more informed decisions by embedding analytics into how you do business.

I hope you will find our experience relevant and useful as you consider how to best seize on the power of big data, the world’s newest natural resource for competitive advantage. Progressive leaders are putting big data to work in fields ranging from finance to farming, from presidential politics to professional sports. It’s not just the data; it’s the insights gained from analyzing data that give organizations an edge over the competition.

As I tell clients, transformation is hard; it takes ongoing commitment and leadership from the top of the organization. But if there’s one truth I’ve learned about transformation over the years, it’s that you should always move faster than you think you should. That's the only way to stay ahead of today's unrelenting pace of change.

This principle holds true for the adoption of analytics, the centerpiece of the next wave of our transformation. Don't wait for your data to be perfect. The time to start on this journey is now...and we hope our own experience at IBM will help you accelerate the benefits that accrue when you unlock the hidden value and power of your data.

—Linda Sanford

IBM Senior Vice President, Enterprise Transformation

Preface

The genesis for this book came when Doug Dow, Vice President, Business Analytics Transformation, observed that a number of good analytics books were being published, written by experts in analytics, and that IBM had experts with significant experience solving business problems by applying analytics. Dow approached Brenda Dietrich, an IBM Fellow and an eminent operations research and analytics expert. Dietrich was receptive to the idea but was reluctant to sign up to write the book alone. Dow later approached two of his Business Analytics Transformation department members, Emily Plachy and Maureen Norton, who both jumped at the chance to tell IBM's story. Another motivation for the book is that Dow receives frequent requests from clients to learn how IBM is using analytics to elevate business results, so we know that IBM's story is of interest.

As we embarked on the journey to write this book about analytics, we were mindful of the rising tide of materials touting the value of analytics. So what would cause someone to cast his or her net and catch this one? Would a book about the challenges and triumphs, to continue the analogy, of one of the largest global ships on the sea have insights and lessons that others could benefit from, or at least find entertaining enough to read? We decided that this is a story that needed to be told. We decided that C-level executives in Fortune 500 companies, small business owners, and MBA students and faculty would see themselves and their challenges on these pages, and we needed to write this book. Introducing readers to a wide spectrum of ideas about how analytics is much more than a technology and instead is a smarter way of doing business would be reason enough to sail forward.

When we started planning for the book, we decided to organize it by business function. We identified analytics projects within a business function that were realizing value. Next, we interviewed the key members on the projects. Then, one of the authors volunteered to be the lead writer for that chapter.

We authors made heavy use of IBM Connections, IBM's collaborative software, to interact as we wrote the book, creating a Connections Activity for the book, organized by chapters. During reviews, we added Connections Folders and Files, which helped us keep track of the many reviews and versions of each chapter. With three authors working in different locations, efficient collaboration was essential.

As the writing journey progressed, a common phrase kept coming into our conversations: "All roads lead to the book." The book became a seminal part of our work, feeding and enriching every aspect of our day jobs. We were able to leverage insights from the work to improve insights and results, effect connections between teams that were tackling similar problems, and help other transformation teams tell their stories.

Another very exciting aspect to this book is that we wanted it to be useful to the business leaders of today and tomorrow; reaching students and faculty is a high priority. During the development of the book, two of the authors, Maureen and Emily, developed and taught an innovative three-day pilot workshop at a premier MBA program in Europe, HEC University. Working with Dr. Hammou Messatfa, Technical Leader, European Government Industry, IBM Sales and Distribution, they held a very successful big data and analytics workshop, which led to additional analytic educational initiatives. Just as the book was in the final editing stages, Maureen had the opportunity to teach at a big data and analytics workshop for MBA students in the Middle East as well.

Color Images

PDFs of the color images for this book can be downloaded from the companion website. Go to www.ibmpressbooks.com/title/9780133833034 and click the Downloads tab.

Acknowledgments

The stories in this book, detailing IBM's use of analytics to transform processes and results, could not have been told without the time, talent, and cooperation of many people. Some have been quoted in the chapters or referenced in endnotes, but many more helped along the way. We thank Ross Mauri and Doug Dow, whose enthusiasm and executive support of this project made it possible. We interviewed more than 70 people, including executives and practitioners, and we worked with staff members, communications professionals, editors, and more from the teams. We are very grateful to the people mentioned below for telling us their stories and contributing to this book.

Foreword: Linda Sanford, Tim Ensign

Chapter 1: Doug Dow, Jeff Jonas, Ross Mauri

Chapter 2: Murray Campbell, Rafi Ezry, Jonathan Ferrar, Werner Geyer, Vlad Gogish, Rudy Karsan, Zahir Ladhani, Stela Lupushor, Randy MacDonald, Sadat Shami

Chapter 3: Naoki Abe, Steve Bayline, Mila Davidzenka, Markus Ettl, Mark Evancho, Donnie Haye, Renee Hook, Pat Knight, Rahul Nahar, Fran O'Sullivan, John Wargo, Emmanuel Yashchin, Paul Zulpa

Chapter 4: Mike Billmeier, Peter Hayes, Carlos Passi, Paul Price, Christian Toft-Nielsen, Natalia Ruderman

Chapter 5: James Correa, Suzy Deffeyes, Matthew Ganis, Jeanette Horan, Francoise Legoues, George Stark, Marie Wallace, Sara Weber

Chapter 6: Melody Dunn, Ben Edwards, Stefanos Manganaris, Stephen Scott, Chris Wong

Chapter 7: Jean Francois Abramatic, Nick Kadochnikov

Chapter 8: Mark Allman, Robert Baseman, Soumyadip Ghosh, Pierre Haren, Perry Hartswick, Jean Francois Puget, Peter Rimshnick, Harley Witt

Chapter 9: David Bush, Matt Callahan, Martin Fleming, Nicholas Otto, Stephen Piper, Kylie Skeahan, Patricia Spugani

Chapter 10: Cesar Berrospi, Jack Bisceglia, Odellia Boni, Greg Dillon, Daniel D'Elena, Sherif Goma, Joe Haugslund, Abdel Labbi, Sergey Makogon, Gregory Westerwick, James Williams

In addition to these people, several others added to the stories in meaningful ways during their review: Jonathan Correnti, Patrick Gibney, Mark Harris, and Ruth Manners. Greg Golden provided valuable guidance and support to get us started. We would also like to thank Steven Stansel and Ellice Uffer from IBM Press for their early encouragement and ongoing support and Mary Beth Ray and the many others from Pearson Education who improved the book and brought it over the finish line. We would like to thank Doug Dow, who read each chapter numerous times, providing valuable feedback. Each of us also owes a debt of gratitude to our families. Writing this book involved many nights, weekends, holidays, and “vacations.” Brenda is grateful for the support and uninterrupted writing time that Peter, Joshua, Monica, Ingrid, and Irwin accommodated. Emily treasures the support and keen interest in “the book,” as well as the detailed, constructive feedback for one of the chapters, she received from her husband, Tony. Maureen cherishes the inspiration and enthusiastic support for “the book” she received from her husband, Bill, and their three children, Erin, Colleen, and William. Each of us now understands why so many authors apologize to their families in the acknowledgments section.

About the Authors

Dr. Brenda L. Dietrich is an IBM Fellow and Vice President. She joined IBM in 1984 and has worked in the area now called analytics for her entire career. Her early work involved applying mathematical models to improve the performance of IBM manufacturing lines. During her career, she has worked with almost every IBM business unit and applied analytics to numerous IBM decision processes. For more than a decade, she led the Mathematical Sciences function in the IBM Research division, where she was responsible for both basic research on computational mathematics and for the development of novel applications of mathematics for both IBM and its clients. In addition to her work within IBM, she has been the president of INFORMS, the world's largest professional society for operations research and management sciences, she is an INFORMS Fellow, and she has received multiple service awards from INFORMS. She has served on the board of trustees of SIAM and on several university advisory boards. She is a member of the National Academy of Engineering. She holds more than a dozen patents, has co-authored numerous publications, and frequently speaks on analytics at conferences. She holds a BS in mathematics from UNC and an MS and PhD in operations research/information engineering from Cornell. Her personal research includes manufacturing scheduling, services resource management, transportation logistics, integer programming, and combinatorial duality. She currently leads the emerging technologies team in the IBM Watson™ group.

Dr. Emily C. Plachy is a Distinguished Engineer in Business Analytics Transformation, responsible for leading an increased use of analytics across IBM. She has integrated data analysis into her work throughout her career. Since joining IBM in 1982, she has held a number of technical leadership roles including CTO, Process, Methods, and Tools in IBM Global Business Services® (GBS), providing architecture and technology leadership and driving the adoption of consistent methods and tools in GBS, and CTO, Enterprise Integration, GBS, providing architecture and technology leadership. She has also held a variety of roles in IBM, including development, ad tech, research, emerging business opportunities, technical sales, and services. Her technology skills include data integration, enterprise integration, solution architecture, software development, and asset reuse. She has experience in multiple industries, including banking, consumer products, retail, telecommunications, healthcare, and petroleum. She has a BS degree in applied mathematics from Washington University, an MSc degree in computer science from the University of Waterloo, and a DSc degree in computer science from Washington University. In 1992, Emily was elected to the IBM Academy of Technology, a body of approximately 1,000 of IBM's top technical leaders, and she served as its President from 2009 to 2011. She has been a long-term champion of women in technology. She is a member of Women in Technology International, the Society of Women Engineers, and INFORMS. Emily lives in New York with her husband, Tony. She is on Twitter @eplachy and on LinkedIn at <http://www.linkedin.com/pub/emily-plachy/3/1bb/777>.

Maureen Fitzgerald Norton, MBA, JD, is a Distinguished Market Intelligence Professional and Executive Program Manager in Business Analytics Transformation, responsible for driving the widespread use of analytics across IBM. She pioneered the development of an outcome-focused communications strategy to drive the culture change needed for analytics adoption. Maureen created analytics case studies and innovative learning exercises for teaching analytics. She co-created an innovative analytics workshop and taught MBA students in Europe and the Middle East. In her previous role, Maureen led project teams applying analytics to IBM Smarter Planet® initiatives in public safety, global social services, commerce, and merchandising, specializing in cost/benefit analysis and return on investment of analytic projects. Maureen became the first woman in IBM to earn the designation of Distinguished Market Intelligence Professional for developing innovative approaches to solving business issues and knowledge gaps through analysis. She has held a number of analytic and management roles in IBM. She earned BA and MBA degrees from the University of New Haven and a JD degree from the University of Connecticut School of Law. She is a licensed attorney and did her thesis on the legal implications of artificial intelligence. She lives in Connecticut with her husband, Dr. William Norton, and three children, Erin, Colleen, and William. She is a dual citizen of the United States and Ireland. In addition to Analytics Across the Enterprise, Maureen has published “The Benefits of Social Media Analytics 2013” with the IBM Academy of Technology and “Social Media Analytics: Measuring Value Across Enterprises and Industries” in the Journal of Management Systems. Maureen is on Twitter @mfnorton and on LinkedIn at <http://www.linkedin.com/in/maureennorton/>.

This page intentionally left blank

I

Why Big Data and Analytics?

“The most competitive organizations are going to make sense of what they are observing fast enough to do something about it while they are still observing it.”

—Jeff Jonas, IBM Fellow and Chief Scientist, Context Computing, IBM Corporation

This is the story of how an iconic company founded more than a century ago, and once deemed a “dinosaur” that would not be able to survive the 1990s, has learned lesson after lesson about survival and transformation. The use of analytics to bring more science into the business decision process is a key underpinning of this survival and transformation. Now for the first time, the inside story of how analytics is being used across the IBM enterprise is being told. According to Ginni Rometty, Chairman, President, and Chief Executive Officer, IBM Corporation, “Analytics is forming the silver thread through the future of everything we do.” What is analytics? In simple terms, analytics is any mathematical or scientific method that augments data with the intent of providing new insight. With the nearly 1 trillion connected objects and devices generating an estimated 2.5 billion gigabytes of new data each day,¹ analytics can help discover insights in the data. That insight creates competitive advantage when used to inform actions and decisions. Data is becoming the world's new natural resource, and learning how to use that resource is a game changer.

This book will help you chart your own course to using analytics as a smarter way of driving outcomes. To get the most value from analytics, start with the strategy you are executing and apply analytics to your most important business problems. If you have thought of analytics as only a technology, this book will change that. Analytics is not just a technology; it is a way of doing business. Through the use of analytics, insights from data can be created to augment the gut feelings and intuition that many decisions are based on today. Analytics does not replace human judgment or diminish the creative, innovative spirit but rather informs it with new insights to be weighed in the decision process. Michael Lewis, in his book Moneyball: The Art of Winning an Unfair Game, describes how even in baseball, which is rooted in statistics, analytics enabled the Oakland Athletics to assemble a competitive baseball team, despite paying the third-lowest salaries.² Analytics for the sake of analytics will not get you far. To drive the most value, analytics should be applied to solving your most important business challenges and deployed widely. Analytics is a means, not an end. It is a way of thinking that leads to fact-based decision making.

"We believe that analytics is no longer an emerging field; today's businesses will thrive only if they master the application of analytics to all forms of data. Whether your office is a scientific lab, a manufacturing company, an emergency room, a government agency, or a professional sports stadium, there is no industry left where an analytics-trained professional cannot make a positive impact," says Brenda Dietrich, IBM Fellow and Vice President, Emerging Technologies, IBM Watson.

The intent of this book is to take some of the mystery out of how an organization can leverage big data and analytics to achieve its goals by giving current and future leaders a front-row seat to see how analytics was leveraged to transform IBM. Many consultants, academicians, and others have written eloquently on the topic of analytics, but the stories from within IBM as told by the people who learned lesson after lesson will give a real-world perspective on what works, what doesn't work, and how you can either start or accelerate your own transformation journey.

Why IBM Started an Enterprise-Wide Journey to Use Analytics

IBM has been using what we now call analytics in manufacturing and product design since the late 1950s and in supply chain operations since the 1980s. A pivotal meeting took place in 2004 between Brenda Dietrich and Linda Sanford, then Vice President of Enterprise Transformation, IBM Corporation, when IBM expanded its use of analytics from physical applications, such as supply chain and manufacturing, to applications, such as sales and finance, that did not have processes with such obvious physical characteristics, and IBM's enterprise-wide transformation journey to use analytics was launched.

In 2004, Dietrich led the Mathematical Sciences Department in IBM Research, a group that included a range of computational mathematics disciplines, including statistics, data mining, and operations research. Coincidentally, both Dietrich and Sanford received degrees in operations research, which is the practical application of math to real-world problems and was a precursor to much of what is now called business analytics. Sanford had seen the value of the mathematical methods developed in the Mathematical Sciences Department applied to IBM's supply chain operations.

Sanford's transformation team was looking for opportunities to build more analytics capability into IBM's overall transformation. She knew they had to put measurable successes on the board early to create a sense of credibility for their work. Dietrich and Sanford discussed the IBM sales process and the simple, easily tracked metric annual revenue per IBM seller. The goal was to increase the numerator, to generate top-line growth for the company. They started with a small pilot program, working with sales representatives in the general business group in Canada. That initial pilot was able to use IBM internal data, along with publicly available data, to score sales opportunities. The immediate results were a higher-yield pipeline for the sellers and improved revenue per seller. More importantly, they proved the power of analytics to support growth and transformation.

IBM has been an avid consumer of analytic capabilities for the past decade. Use of analytics has spread from engineering-based processes, such as product design, through logistics processes, such as supply chain operations, to human-centric processes, such as sales and workforce management. Seeing the cultural shift in the receptiveness to the use of analytics has been amazing to see. When IBM started developing sales analytics tools, many sales leaders were skeptical about the value of such tools, believing that converting an opportunity into a sale was largely a function of the seller's actions and could not be predicted in advance. But over the past decade, there has been a sea change in attitude. Now sales managers are asking for more analytics support so they can take their organizations to the next level of performance.

Big Data and Analytics Demystified

If analytics is any mathematical or scientific method that augments data with the intent of providing new insight, aren't all data queries analytics? No. Analytics is often thought of as answering questions using data, but it involves more than simple data (or database) queries. Analytics involves the use of mathematical or scientific methods to generate insight from the data.

Analytics should be thought of as a progression of capabilities, starting with the well-known methods of business intelligence, and extending through more complex methods involving significant amounts of both mathematical modeling and computation. Reporting is the most widely used analytic capability. Reporting gathers data from multiple sources, such as business automation, and creates standard summarizations of the data. Visualizations are created to bring the data to life and make it easy to interpret. As a generic example, consider store sales data from a retail chain. The data is generated through the point of sale system by reading the product bar codes at checkout. Daily reports might include total store revenue for each store, revenue by department for each region, and national revenue for each stock-keeping unit (SKU). Weekly reports might include the same metrics, as well as comparisons to the previous week and comparisons to the same week in the previous calendar year. Many reporting systems also allow for expanding the summarized data into its component parts. This is particularly useful in understanding changes in the sums. For example, a regional store manager might want to examine the store-level detail that resulted in an increase in revenue from the home entertainment department. She would be interested in knowing whether sales increased at most of the stores in the region, or whether the increase in total sales resulted from a significant sales jump in just a few stores. She might also look at whether the increase could be traced back to just a few SKUs, such as an unusually popular movie or video game. If a likely cause of the sales increase can be identified, she might alert the store managers to monitor inventory of the popular products, reposition the products within a store, or even reallocate inventory of the products across stores in her region.

Descriptive and Predictive Analytics

Reporting, also known as descriptive analytics, is focused on reporting what has happened, analyzing contributing data to determine why it happened, and monitoring new data to determine what is happening now. Business intelligence (BI) software provides capabilities for descriptive analytics. BI helps enterprises understand how their organization is operating by giving them a clear picture of the recent past. The deployment of BI software also requires an enterprise to carefully think about its key performance metrics, to understand what it wants to measure and monitor, and to develop some process for exploring potential causes underlying changes in measurements. Sometimes it is obvious what should be measured. Other times it is less obvious, such as when someone discovers a leading indicator of revenue through analysis. Once these capabilities have been mastered, many organizations seek to look forward and get “headlights” on what will happen in the future. They turn to predictive analytics, which uses techniques such as statistics and data mining to analyze current and historical information to make predictions about what will happen in the future. Predictive analytics typically produces both a prediction of what will happen and a probability that the prediction will happen.³

In many ways, the difference between descriptive analytics and predictive analytics is like the difference between a weather report and a weather forecast. Whereas a report describes what has happened, a forecast tells what is likely to happen and how likely it is to happen. An accurate prediction has greater business value, which is why considerable effort is applied to finding data that contains valuable signals about the future and developing analysis methods that can extract the signal effectively. In the past, performing predictive analytics had a reputation of requiring deep analytic skill. Today, modern tools have broadened the population of users who can leverage predictive analytics to augment decision making. No introduction to predictive analytics is complete without the caution that a prediction can be no better than the data that is used to make it. Thus incorrect data will likely lead to incorrect predictions, and events that have never been observed and captured in the data will never be predicted from analysis of that data.

Predicting what will happen based on the past can be quite useful. It can, for example, help a regional retail manager understand demand for a frozen dessert in the stores he manages as a function of the weather and the local competition. But, more importantly, it can also show him the relationship between past sales of this dessert and promotional pricing, coupons, and advertising. If he assumes that the same relationships will hold going forward, he can then estimate (or predict) future sales that will occur under different pricing and advertising schedules. Predictive analytics that finds relationships between actions and outcomes is particularly useful.

Prescriptive Analytics

We use the term prescriptive analytics to cover analytics methods that recommend actions. In general, the goal is to find a set of actions that is predicted to produce the best possible outcome. To do this, you need to understand the relationship between actions and outcomes. In many cases, that relationship is clear and (more importantly) constant. If producing and distributing a newspaper circular costs 30 cents per copy, then the cost of distributing it to any specified number of customers is clear: 30 cents multiplied by the number of customers. However, the value, in terms of increased revenue, of the circular can only be inferred by looking at past data and, for example, comparing sales in weeks during which no circular was distributed to sales in weeks in which a circular was distributed. But the inferred relationship may be different in different towns, and it may vary by week of the year. That is, the computed value must be recalculated whenever new data becomes available. Despite the limitations, it seems clear that value can be derived through careful and appropriate use of predicted relationships to make decisions. Mathematical optimization has been used for decades to recommend decisions based on known, constant relationships between actions and outcomes. It is used extensively in supply chain and logistics decisions involving scheduling and allocation of resources. More recently, it has been used for decisions where some relationships are predicted from historical data rather than being based on physical limits (for example, transportation time) or business rules (for example, economic order quantities). Examples include setting prices based on predicted price elasticity, advertising based on predicted views of the ad and predicted sales lift per viewer, and targeted promotional offers (for example, coupons at checkout) based on customer segmentation.

Social Media Analytics

Analytics can also be applied to data that does not come from within an enterprise and to data that is not easily interpreted as transactions, such as data from Twitter. Several emerging areas within analytics are already providing business value. One area is social media analytics, which analyzes, or “listens,” to social media data to assess public opinion, or sentiment, on a variety of topics.⁴ Examples of social media include blogs, micro-blogs (such as Twitter), social networking (such as Facebook), and forums. It is possible to mine social media for comments on a particular subject and analyze them for positive and negative sentiment, how people feel about a topic, or the “pulse” of a community related to a topic. A common way to communicate sentiment is to use a dashboard with views for volume trends over time, sentiment trends over time, and geographic distribution of sentiment. A frequent use of social media is to mine customer data to get feedback on products.⁵ Measuring the return on investment (ROI) of using analytics for social media can present a challenge. Value driver trees (that is, visualizations of the hierarchy of influences of different value drivers) have been used to measure the value of using social media analytics for a sports clothing manufacturer, a city government, and an automotive manufacturer, among other industries.⁶

Entity Analytics

Another emerging area is entity analytics, which focuses on sorting through data and grouping together data that relates to the same entity. As a simple example of the power of entity analytics, consider three customer records, two of which have no data in common, and a third that has a driver’s license number which is the same as that of customer record one as well as a credit card number which is the same as customer record two. These three records can be combined into one record that has more complete data than each of the three individual records. Entity analytics is a powerful technique for recognizing context and detecting like and related entities across large collections of data. Jeff Jonas, IBM Fellow and Chief Scientist, Context Computing, contends that the data enterprises have to deal with is growing so fast that enterprises are developing amnesia; that is, using the same techniques to cleanse and analyze data causes them to get behind because the amount of data is increasing so fast.⁷ Jonas uses a puzzle as a metaphor for organizations’ need to sort through data to make sense of it and develop context; he says that an ever-growing pile of puzzle pieces represents the ever-growing amount of data, and until you try to assemble the pieces of the puzzle or data, you do not know what you are dealing with.⁸ When teaching MBA students about big data and analytics, Maureen Norton and Emily Plachy include an exercise where the students work enthusiastically to put together hundreds of puzzle pieces using multiple tables, shouting out insights as they discover them.

Cognitive Computing

Although entity analytics is helpful in finding relationships between pieces of data and can incorporate new data to either confirm or negate previously found relationships, additional methods can be applied to garner insight from unstructured data. Cognitive computing, computing systems that interact with people in new ways to provide insight and advice, is emerging just when we need it to help us uncover insight from the explosion of big data. Chapter 11, “Reflections and a Look to the Future,” describes this exciting new era of computing.

Big Data

The most easily available source of data for analytics is an enterprise’s own internal transaction data. For our retail example, this includes inventory data, sales data, employee data, and promotion and advertising data. Increasingly, enterprises are augmenting their internal data with data from external sources, including social media data. Whereas enterprise transaction data tells the retailer what has been bought, social media data can give the retailer early insight into what customers intend to buy. With the adoption of social media tools such as Twitter and the growth of blogs and forums on the Internet, the amount of social media data is growing very large, and analyzing it is providing significant insights and benefits to businesses.

Big data has four dimensions, known as the four Vs:⁹

- Volume: The size of data, which can range from terabytes to petabytes of data
- Variety: The forms of data—structured, text, multimedia
- Velocity: The speed at which data is available and analysis of streaming data
- Veracity: Data quality—managing the reliability of data

Consumers who are active in the big data social media world are driving enterprises to create collaborative systems, known as systems of engagement.¹⁰ These new systems have led to the creation of engagement analytics to measure the value of engagement.¹¹ Engagement analytics can be used to measure employee engagement and customer engagement. Systems of engagement and engagement analytics are covered in more detail in Chapter 5, “Enabling Analytics Through Information Technology.”

This book shows how IBM has solved a wide variety of business problems by leveraging analytics to elevate business results. The types of analytics described include predictive analytics, prescriptive analytics, social media analytics, and entity analytics. Some of the analytics is performed on big data. The use of analytics not only drives cost savings and revenue growth but also provides more accurate and timely information to improve decision making and reduce complexity, which helps better manage the business. Analytics gives you the ability to anticipate, and that's very powerful. So what does this mean for you? Whether you are in business for yourself or within a large company or a nonprofit or a government entity or a classroom preparing for your future, knowledge of the possibilities that analytics opens up will give you a competitive advantage. Understanding the journey that IBM has taken will shine a light on where you can get value from big data and analytics and illuminate your path to success in business.

Why Analytics Matters

“People respond to facts. Rational people will make rational decisions if you present them with the right data.”

—Linda Sanford, Senior Vice President, Enterprise Transformation, IBM Corporation

Quite simply, analytics matters because it works. You can be overwhelmed with data and the value of it may be unattainable until you apply analytics to create the insights. Human brains were not built to process the amounts of data that are today being generated through social media, sensors, and more. While gut instinct is often the basis for decisions, analytically informed intuition is what wins going forward.

Several studies have highlighted the value of analytics. Companies that use predictive analytics are outperforming those that do not by a factor of five.¹² In a 2012 joint survey by the IBM Institute of Business Value and the Said Business School at the University of Oxford of more than 1,000 professionals around the world, 63% of respondents reported that the use of information (including big data and analytics) is creating a competitive advantage for their organizations.¹³ IBM depends on analytics to meet its business objectives and provide shareholder value. The bottom line is that analytics helps the bottom line. Your competition will not be waiting to take advantage of the new insights from big data. Should you?

IBM has approached the use of analytics with a spirit of innovation and a belief that analytics will illuminate insights in data that can help improve outcomes. The company hasn't been afraid to make mistakes or redesign programs that haven't worked as planned. Unlike traditional IT projects, most analytics projects are exploratory. For example, the Development Expense Baseline Project explored innovative ways to determine development expense at a detailed level, thereby addressing a problem that many thought was impossible to solve. IBM analytic teams haven't waited for perfect data to get started; rather, they have refined and improved their data along the way. For example, the Coverage Optimization with Profitability project team described in Chapter 9, "Increasing Sales Performance," knew it had incomplete data, but rather than wait for the various data stewards to improve their data, the team jumped in and made progress incrementally on data governance and data cleansing. Using this approach will reduce your time to value. Using this approach will reduce your time to value. The key is to put a stake in the ground with a commitment that analytics will be woven into your strategy. That's how IBM does it. This approach is also effective with big data. Rather than postpone the leveraging of big data, you should embrace it, establish a link between your business priorities and your information agenda, and apply analytics to become a smarter enterprise.

Governance

A majority of clients who have engaged with IBM to learn about the internal transformation efforts are most interested in the governance topic. How do you organize to take advantage of analytics? Where do you put the analytics group? Is it an IT function? Who leads analytics projects, and who is on the team? How do you set up your organization to be able to adapt processes to incorporate analytics? Interestingly, it is organizational obstacles—not data or financial concerns—that are roadblocks to adoption of big data and analytics; examples include not knowing how to use analytics to improve the performance of the enterprise and lack of bandwidth because of competing priorities.¹⁴

IBM's approach has been very pragmatic and initially was quite focused in areas of the business that had the most challenges. Analytics was used as a means to address the most significant challenges first. There was a general notion that analytics could add value within IBM, but where it got very specific very fast was with large, critical problems in supply chain operations. At one point, supply chain problems were costing IBM millions of dollars per year. That story changed dramatically when using analytics become a way of doing business, and today IBM's supply chain is world class.

IBM's transformation to use analytics is part of a larger enterprise transformation that began in 1993 to transform its business processes. As part of this enterprise transformation, IBM's organization evolved to incorporate Value Services, defined as a group of functional units, processes, and initiatives dedicated to working collaboratively to improve productivity and effectiveness through business transformation.¹⁵

1. Globally Integrated Enterprise Shared Services: To support this transformation, globally integrated organizational units providing support services to all of IBM were formed.¹⁶ Four of the functional areas described in the upcoming chapters are Globally Integrated Enterprise Shared Services: human resources, integrated supply chain finance, information technology, and marketing.
2. Enterprise Transformation Initiatives: A number of enterprise-wide initiatives were launched to drive radical, innovative transformation in the way IBM works with clients, business partners, and its own employees. Three Enterprise Transformation Initiatives, which are described in later chapters, are Development, Smarter CommerceTM Inside IBM, and Hardware Product Management Transformation.

Since they provide support services to all of IBM or drive radical, innovative transformation, Globally Integrated Enterprise Shared Services and Enterprise Transformation Initiatives are control points for leveraging analytics. For example, when Finance creates and deploys an analytic solution to predict spending, all of IBM's business units reap the benefits.

The next evolution of IBM's transformation is to migrate from a globally integrated enterprise to a smarter enterprise by optimizing the entire enterprise with the following technologies:¹⁷

- Analytics to gain business insight for customers and the enterprise
- Social media for business collaboration both inside and outside the enterprise
- Mobile communications for pervasive connectivity
- Cloud technologies for IT enablement

IBM's transformation to a smarter enterprise is described in "Creating a Smarter Enterprise: The Science of Transformation."¹⁸ IBM's transformation to use analytics enterprise-wide, which began in 2004, continues; today, analytics is complemented with social, mobile, and cloud.

Many people are surprised to learn that at IBM, analytics was not centralized and not driven out of IT. Analytics is mostly thought of as a technology, and many expect technology projects to be owned by IT, but because analytics is a way of doing business, it needed to be close to the business, woven like a silver thread into the fabric of all of the business processes. The focus was on how to become smarter and more agile with the use of analytics to solve business problems; being close to those problems was required. Business analysts partner with analytics practitioners and in some cases used what IBM refers to as the “secret sauce” for analytics—IBM Research, which is a unique and differentiating function. Few companies have a 400-person math department to draw on. What does this mean for other companies? IBM has leveraged its math department both to apply analytics internally and to add some of the learnings and benefits to its analytics products and solutions. So you can get the benefit of a large math department without having to have your own.

Proven Approaches

Staying focused on solving business problems was the pragmatic start, and the other crucial element was having very high-level executive support from the beginning. From a governance perspective, those are two key levers to drive value: focus on actions and decisions that will generate value and have high-level executive sponsorship.

The ideal team to do analytics is a collaboration between an experienced data scientist,¹⁹ a person steeped in the area of the business where the challenge needs to be solved, and an IT person with expertise in the data in that particular area of the business.

A joint study by MIT Sloan and the IBM Institute for Business Value developed several recommendations.²⁰ The first is that you start with your biggest and highest-value business challenge. The next recommendation is to ask a lot of questions about that challenge in order to understand what’s going on or what could be going on. Then you go out and look for what data you might have that’s relevant to that challenge. Finally, you determine which analytic technique can be used to analyze the data and solve the problem.

Because most companies have constraints on the amount of money and skills available for projects, estimating the ROI can provide a better differentiator for selecting the project with the highest potential impact than relying on instincts. Estimating an analytics project’s ROI involves both capturing the project costs and measuring the value. As mentioned earlier in this chapter, value driver trees are an effective technique for measuring value.²¹ Analytics changes the way you approach your business and becomes an integral part of the way you manage and transform your business.

Gauging Progress

Once you've started solving business problems using big data and analytics, how do you know if your capabilities are progressing? IBM developed the Analytics Quotient (AQ) so that organizations can measure their maturity in adopting big data and analytics and set goals for enhanced adoption.²² Based on answers to approximately 15 questions, organizations can find out if they are novices, builders, leaders, or masters.

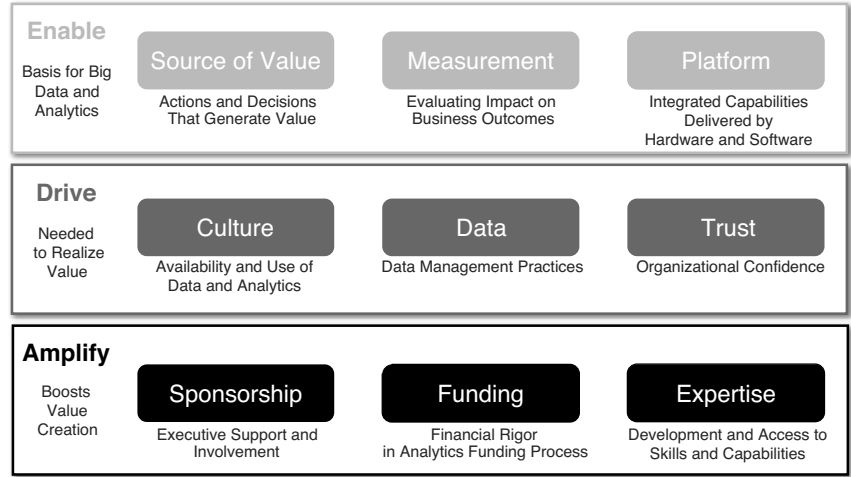

In 2013, the IBM Institute of Business Value published results from a study focused on how to convert insights from big data and analytics into results.²³ More than 900 business and IT executives were surveyed, and through research, nine levers were identified that distinguish leaders who are able to realize value from big data and analytics from those who are not. As described in the report, the nine levers are:²⁴

- Source of Value: Decisions that generate value
- Measurement: Business outcome measurement
- Platform: Integrated hardware and software capabilities
- Culture: The availability and use of data and analytics within an organization
- Data: Formal processes for data governance and security
- Trust: Confidence within the organization
- Sponsorship: Support and involvement of executives
- Funding: A rigorous analytics funding process
- Expertise: Development of and access to data and analytics skills

The authors found a strong link between organizations that excel in these nine levers and organizations that are deriving the greatest value from data and analytics. Further, they found that the levers do not impact the creation of value in the same way, and they identified a progression of three steps—Enable, Drive, and Amplify—each with three of the levers (see Figure 1-1).²⁵

- Enable forms the foundation for creating value from big data and analytics. The foundation is actions and decisions that generate value, measuring outcomes and providing a platform for big data and analytics activities.

- Drive has the actions needed to create value by moving from analytics discovery to value creation, which is aided by having an analytics and big data culture, having data governance and data security, and creating trust.
- Amplify increases the amount of value realized by providing momentum to translate insights into actions that increase an organization’s bottom line. This is done through sharing a common vision, managing and monitoring analytic investments, and knowledge-sharing opportunities.

Source: “Analytics: A blueprint for value—Converting big data and analytics into results,” IBM Institute for Business Value. © 2013 IBM Corporation

Figure 1-1 Nine levers: Capabilities that enable and enhance big data and analytics development, delivery, and value creation

As you start your journey to leverage big data and analytics for business value, start by leveraging the three levers in Enable—Source of Value, Measurement, and Platform—and then move to Drive and then finally to Amplify.

Overview of Nine Journeys

IBM has many business functions. Some of them are generic functions—including human resources, finance, supply chain, sales, information technology, marketing, and services—that can be found in most enterprises.

Other functions—such as software development and hardware manufacturing—are more specific to a technology company, although analogous functions exist in other industries (for example, manufacturing cars in the automotive industry).

This book contains 31 case studies of how nine business functions have incorporated analytics to change the way they do business and to improve their business results. Each business unit's story is told as a separate chapter, beginning with an overview of the unit's journey to improve its business results by leveraging analytics, including the pitfalls and lessons learned, followed by a more detailed description of one or more significant analytics projects within that business unit. The nine business functions started their analytics journey at different times, and they're now at different stages; they also used different approaches. Each journey is different, though we do see some common themes.

Some business units have been on long journeys, others are just starting their journeys, and others are in between. All of the business units have a history of using descriptive analytics or business intelligence. This book concentrates on predictive and prescriptive analytics and newer forms of analytics, such as social media analytics and entity analytics.

IBM's supply chain organization started its journey the earliest and has numerous analytics solutions. You will learn how the supply chain organization is using analytics to reduce expenses and to predict quality problems before there is an impact. The supply chain organization is also using social media analytics to predict supply disruptions based on events around the world. The finance organization also has a rich history of using analytics. Examples include using analytics to reduce financial risk and to reduce the risk of an acquisition failing to meet objectives. IBM's human resources (HR) organization started using analytics more recently and is using predictive analytics to proactively address retention and is using social analytics, big data, and sentiment analysis to take the "pulse" of what employees are thinking about various issues, such as a new HR program. IBM's information technology (IT) organization has developed a number of applications that leverage analytics and big data, such as how to find an employee and how to answer questions about products and services from the sales force.

Emerging Themes

You will notice some common themes in the nine IBM journeys described in this book.

Relationships inferred from data today may not be present in data collected tomorrow. The relationships that you infer from data about the past do not necessarily hold in data that you collect tomorrow. You cannot analyze data once and then make decisions forever based on old analysis. It's important to continually analyze data to verify that previously detected relationships are still valid and to discover new ones. Fortunately, major discontinuities with data do not happen very often, so change generally happens gradually. Social media sentiment, however, has a much shorter half-life than most data. Using relationships derived from past data has been repeatedly demonstrated to work better than assuming that no relationships exist. The relationships that have been detected are likely correlation rather than causality. However, these relationships, if detected and acted upon quickly, may provide at least a temporary business advantage.

You don't have to understand analytics technology to derive value from it. For a long time, many business leaders expressed the opinion that mathematics should be used by only those who understood the details of the computations. However, in recent years this view has been changing, and analytics is being treated like other technologies. You must learn how to use it effectively, but it is not necessary to understand the inner workings in order to apply analytics to business decisions. You have to apply analytics methods in the context of the problem that is being solved and make the results accessible to the end user. But just as the user of a car navigation system does not need to understand the details of the routing algorithm, the end user of analytics does not have to understand the details of the math. Typically, making the results accessible to the end user involves wrapping the math in the language and the process of the end user. Also, the analytics can be embedded deep inside things so that the user does not see it, like in supply chain operations. Analytics should be usable by anyone, not just those with PhDs in statistics or operations research. Some users will want to understand the algorithms and inner workings of an analytics model in order to trust the results prior to adoption, but they are the exception. Chapter 4, "Anticipating the Financial Future," illustrates such a case.

Fast, cheap processors and cheap storage make analysis on big data possible. Moore's law has resulted in vast increases in computing power and vast decreases in the cost of storing and accessing data. With readily available and inexpensive computing, we can do what-if calculations often and test a number of variables in big data for correlation.

Doing things fast is almost always better than doing things perfectly. Often inexact but fast approaches produce enormous gains because they result in better choices than humans would have made without the use of analytics. Over time, the approximate analytics methods can be refined and improved to achieve additional gains. However, for many business processes, there is eventually a point of diminishing returns: The calculations may become more detailed and precise, but the end results are no more accurate or valuable.

Using analytics leads to better auditability and accountability. With the use of analytics, the decision-making process becomes more structured and repeatable, and a decision becomes less dependent on the individual making the decision. When you change which people are in various positions, things still happen in the same way. You can often go back and find out what analysis was used and why a decision was made.

How to Use This Book

We have organized this book so you can choose your best path for navigating the content. The next nine chapters describe how IBM has applied analytics to address challenges in nine different business functions. Some may choose to read the chapters sequentially. Others can instead start with the chapters that are of the most interest to them.

This book can also be used as a reference. The appendix includes a table of the 31 case studies described in this book, including the challenges and outcomes, along with the type of data and analytics techniques used to achieve the outcomes. Using the table, you can map from a particular analytics technique to a business challenge and then map to a chapter and page that describes the challenge. For example, if social media analytics is of interest, the table shows that Chapter 2, “Creating a Smarter Workforce,” describes how IBM’s HR organization uses social media analytics to gain an accurate view of what employees are thinking and that Chapter 3, “Optimizing the Supply Chain,” describes how the supply chain organization uses social media analytics to predict disruptions in the supply chain. You can also examine the table to see if the business challenge you are facing is similar to one in the table.

Analytics Across the Enterprise can be used as a text for or a complement to the textbooks for MBA or undergraduate classes with analytics content as it provides real-world examples of using analytics to transform business areas and improve results. We chose nine as the number of business area stories to include so that these nine chapters, along with this chapter and Chapter 11 would fit into a semester-long course.

This book describes how nine different organizations are using analytics as a way of doing business and how they are realizing business value from data and analytics. Throughout this book, you will learn about the business problems selected, the pitfalls encountered, the business value that can be obtained by using big data and analytics, and the many lessons the teams learned along the way.

Endnotes

1. 2013 IBM Annual Report, IBM Corporation, page 13. <http://www.ibm.com/annualreport/2013/>.
2. Lewis, M., Moneyball: The Art of Winning an Unfair Game, W. W. Norton & Company, 2004.
3. Siegel, E., Predictive Analytics: The Power to Predict Who Will Click, Buy, Lie, or Die, Wiley, 2013.
4. Leskovec, J., "Tutorial: Analytics & Predictive Models for Social Media," Stanford University, 2011. <http://snap.stanford.edu/proj/socmedia-www/>.
5. Elsas, J. L., and Glance, N., "Shopping for Top Forums: Discovering Online Discussion for Product Research," Proceedings of the First Workshop on Social Media Analytics, ACM, New York, 2010. <http://dl.acm.org/citation.cfm?id=1964862&CFID=389807816&CFTOKEN=33144969>.
6. Kadochnikov, N., and Norton, M., "Social Media Analytics: Measuring Value Across Enterprises and Industries," Journal of Management Systems, Volume 23, Number 1, 2013.
7. Jonas, J., "Enterprise Amnesia Versus Enterprise Intelligence," IBM Redbooks Video, TIPS0924, 2013. <http://www.redbooks.ibm.com/abstracts/tips0924.html?Open>.
8. Ibid.
9. Schroeck, M., et al., "Analytics: The Real-World Use of Big Data—How Innovative Enterprises Extract Value from Uncertain Data," IBM Institute for Business Value, 2012. http://www-03.ibm.com/systems/hu/resources/the_real_word_use_of_big_data.pdf.
10. Moore, G., "Systems of Engagement and the Future of Enterprise IT—A Sea Change in Enterprise IT," AIIM, 2011. <http://www.google.com/url?sa=t&rct=j&q=&esrc=s&source=web&cd=1&cad=rja&ved=0CDQQFjAA&url=http%3A%2F%2Fwww.aiim.org%2F~%2Fmedia%2FFiles%2FAIIM%2520White%2520Papers%2FSystems-of-Engagement.pdf&ei=sPL0Uu6zGcXY0gGFzoCYDQ&usg=AFQjCNFS09Ne5zPwcdPEYQsaceW6g5JnBg&sig2=bI-sNdgSnumdHzstwxh6PA&bvm=bv.60799247,d.cWc>.

11. Wallace, M., "Maximize the Value of Your Systems of Engagement," IBM Corporation. <http://www.ibm.com/engage>.
12. LaValle, S., et al., "Analytics: The New Path to Value—How the Smartest Organizations Are Embedding Analytics to Transform Insights into Action," IBM Institute for Business Value, 2010. <http://public.dhe.ibm.com/common/ssi/ecm/en/gbe03371usen/GBE03371USEN.PDF>.
13. Schroeck, M., et al., "Analytics: The Real-World Use of Big Data."
14. LaValle, S., et al., "Analytics: The New Path to Value."
15. Urso, D. L., et al., "Enterprise Transformation: The IBM Journey to Value Services," IBM Journal of Research and Development, Volume 56, Number 6, November/December 2012. <http://ieeexplore.ieee.org/xpl/articleDetails.jsp?tp=&arnumber=6353958&queryText%3Denterprise+transformation+IBM+journey>.
16. DeViney, N., et al., "Becoming a Globally Integrated Enterprise: Lessons on Enabling Organization and Cultural Change," IBM Journal of Research and Development, Volume 56, Number 6, November/December 2012. <http://ieeexplore.ieee.org/xpl/articleDetails.jsp?tp=&arnumber=6353944&queryText%3Dbecoming+a+globally+integrated>.
17. Butner, K., "Creating a Smarter Enterprise: The Science of Transformation," IBM Institute for Business Value, 2013. <http://public.dhe.ibm.com/common/ssi/ecm/en/gbe03584usen/GBE03584USEN.PDF>.
18. Ibid.
19. Rao, A., "The 5 Dimensions of the So-Called Data Scientist," Emerging Technology Blog, Pricewaterhouse Coopers, March 5, 2014. <http://usblogs.pwc.com/emerging-technology/the-5-dimensions-of-the-so-called-data-scientist/>.
20. LaValle, S., et al., "Analytics: The New Path to Value."
21. Kadochnikov, N., and Norton, M., "Social Media Analytics: Measuring Value Across Enterprises and Industries."
22. "From Novice to Master: Understanding the Analytics Quotient Maturity Model," IBM Canada, Ltd., 2011. <http://public.dhe.ibm.com/common/ssi/ecm/en/ytw03169usen/YTW03169USEN.PDF>.
23. Balboni, F., et al., "Analytics: A Blueprint for Value—Converting Big Data and Analytics Insights into Results," IBM Institute for Business Value, 2013. <http://public.dhe.ibm.com/common/ssi/ecm/en/gbe03575usen/GBE03575USEN.PDF>.
24. Ibid., page 5.
25. Ibid., page 6.

This page intentionally left blank

Index

A

Abramatic, Jean-François, 97, 100-102 Accelerated External Reporting, 58 accountability, 17, 65 accounts coverage by investment, 128-130 maximum revenue growth by, 124-126 accounts receivable, 36, 41-43, 47 Accounts Receivable—Next Best Action, 36, 42, 47
accuracy of sentiment analysis, 29 acquisition strategies, 62-64 actions, marketing, 90 activity, 76 adoption, 40, 46
AER (Accelerated External Reporting), 58 agendas, information, 73-74 aggregating data, 99 alerts, 157
aligning incentives, 46 allocation of expenses, 99-105
Amplify, 13
Analytic Ambassador community, 154

analytics, 11
 applying, 67-70 capabilities, 3 current state of, 153
 alerts, 157
 forecasting, 158-159
 simulation, 156
 transactional data, 155 definition of, 1, 4 descriptive, 5 future state of, 160 cognitive computing, 163
 growth of data, 160
 unstructured data, 161-163 leveraging, 122-123, 139-141 predictive, 5 prescriptive, 6 social, 26-29 supply chains, applying to, 33-36 use cases, 166-173
 value of, 9
 workforces, applying to, 21, 24-25
Analytics Framework, 147-148

Analytics Quotient, 13
 AnalyticsZone, 154 anticipating the future. See also predicting balancing risk/rewards, 59-61
 creating cultures, 53-55
 enabling financial value, 51-52
 Finance transformation, 52
 managing efficiency, 55-59
 validating acquisition strategies, 62-64
 Application Developers, 103 Application Management Services, 140 applications availability, 70 development, 71-73
 applying alerts, 157
 analytics, 67-69
 to manufacturing/product management, 107-108
 modernizing servers, 69-70 to supply chains, 33-36 to workforces, 21, 24-25
 box plots, 70
 forecasting, 158-159
 simulation, 156
 transactional data, 155
 approaches (proven), 12
 AQ (Analytics Quotient), 13
 AR (accounts receivable), 36, 41-43, 47 auditability, 17, 65
 automating marketing, 89 availability of applications, 70 awards, 41
 CRN Channel Champion award in 2010, 41
 Leading Innovator Award, 39
 Tech Data 2010 Inventory Optimization
 Partner of the Year, 41

B

B2B (business-to-business), 81, 121,
 132-135
 B2C (business-to-consumer), 81, 86, 121
 balancing risk/rewards, 59, 61
 Baseman, Robert J., 107, 111, 113 behavior, 82
 behavioral analytics, 85
 BI (business intelligence), 5, 58

big data, 8
 enabling, 67-69
 use cases, 166-173
 blogs, 6
 Blue Pages, 103
 box plots, 70
 BPS (Business Performance Services), 128 Bradford, Peter, 102 brands, optimizing value, 38 Bush, David E., 121, 131-132 business cases, building, 123 business intelligence, 5, 58
 Business Partner organization, 39
 Business Performance Services, 128 Business Process Services, 141 business-to-business, 81, 121, 132-135 business-to-consumer, 81, 86, 121 buy-in, 46

C

calculation of confidence intervals, 157
 Callahan, Matt, 126
 Campbell, Murray, 23
 cash processes, 34
 CCHs (client collaboration hubs), 163 CDM (Cognos Disclosure Management), 58
 CFO (chief financial officer), 131 charts, Gantt, 110
 chief financial officer, 131
 Chief Human Resources Officer (CHRO), 24
 chief information officers, 67-68, 83, 131 chief marketing officers, 73, 84 chief procurement officers, 123 CIO magazine, 61
 CIOs (chief information officers), 67-68, 83, 131
 client collaboration hubs, 163 clients, 81-82, 85 data foundation development, 85-87 early problem warnings, 147-148 effects of marketing actions, 90
 IBM digital strategy, 92-93 performance management, 87-89 sales, 35
 cloud technologies, 11
 CMOs (chief marketing officers), 73, 84

cognitive computing, 7-8, 163-164
 Cognos Disclosure Management, 58
 Cognos TM1, 58 collaboration, 8, 12, 35, 163 collecting data from only publicly available data, 26 collectors, productivity, 41-43 commercialization, 35 communications, mobile, 11 commuting to work, 24 conferences, video, 54 confidence intervals, 157 measures, 157 Confucius, 151 consulting, 139-140 content analytics, 162 contracts, predicting risk, 142-143 COP (Coverage Optimization with Profitability), 123-124, 132
 Corporate Executive Board Sales
 Leadership report, 122 correlation, effects of marketing actions, 90
 cost of employees, 22 savings, 112. See also yield Council on Foreign Relations, 100
 Country Financial Risk Scorecard, 59-61
 Coverage Optimization with Profitability, 123-124, 132
 CPOs (chief procurement officers), 123
 CRISP-DM (Cross Industry Standard Process for Data Mining), 45 CRM (customer relationship marketing), 87
 CRN Channel Champion award in 2010, 41
 Cross Industry Standard Process for Data Mining, 45
 cross-company efficiencies, 132-135 Crunch Day example, 161 cubes, 55 Culture, 13 cultures, 30, 53-55, 72, 76, 125 Cumulative Sum, 36 current state of analytics, 153
 alerts, 157
 forecasting, 158-159
 simulation, 156
 transactional data, 155

customer analytics, 81-82, 85 customer relationship marketing, 87
Customer-Activated Enterprise, The: Insights from the Global C-Suite Study, 68, 84
 CUSUM (Cumulative Sum), 36
 CV Wizard, 143

D

D'Elena, Daniel, 139, 143
 Data, 13
 data developing foundations, 85-87 growth of, 160
 mining, 111
 unstructured, 161, 163 data scientist, 12, 84, 89, 159-160 databases, 125 days of supply, 40 decision making enabling, 99-105
 simulation models, 156 delivering services developing, 141-142
 early problem warnings, 147-148 leveraging analytics, 139-141 predicting risk, 142-143 workforce performance, 143-147 delivery support, 35 demand, supply visibility, 39-41
 Demand Capture, 144 DemandTec, 158 demographics, 82
 deploying sellers for maximum growth revenue, 124-126 within territories, 126-128 descriptive analytics, 5 design, 108 detecting aberrant events, 113-114 quality problems early, 36-38 security incidents, 71 Dev ETI (Development Enterprise Transformation Initiative), 101 development, 35, 108
 applications, 71-73
 data foundation, 85-87 digital strategies, 92-93 expenses, 99-105

marketing, 90
 performance management, 87-89 services, 141-142
 social media, 73
Development Enterprise Transformation Initiative, 98, 101
Development Expense Baseline Project, 10, 99, 104
Development Productivity Indicators Project, 101 devices, testing, 108 dicing wafers, 109. See also semiconductors Dietrich, Brenda, 2-3, 93, 111
 digital strategies, 92-93
 Dillon, Greg, 148 directories, Blue Pages, 103 disruptions, predicting, 43-45 diversity of teams, 93
 Dollard, Cary, 115
 DOS (days of supply), 40
 Dow, Doug, 65, 97
 Drive, 13
 Dun & Bradstreet, 125
 Dunn, Melody, 87

E

early problem warnings, 147-148
 education, 24
 Edwards, Ben, 81, 84
 effects of marketing actions, 90 efficiencies, B2B solutions, 132-135 efficiency
 managing, 55-59 marketing, 88
 eminence, 76
EMM (IBM Enterprise Marketing Management) Automation Project, 88 employees insights, 27 retaining, 25 retention, 58 social analytics, 26-29 enable, 30
 Enable, 13
 enabling big data, 67, 69
 decision making, 99-105

financial value, 51-52
 balancing risk/rewards, 59-61
 creating cultures, 53-55
 managing efficiency, 55-59
 validating acquisition strategies, 62-64 signature client experiences, 85-87 transformation, 68-77
 engagement analytics, 75
 Enhanced Data Mining, 111
 Enterprise Social Pulse, 26-29
 Enterprise Transformation Initiatives, 11, 98, 115, 123
 entity analytics, 7
Essential CIO, The: Insights from the Global Chief Information Officer Study, 67
 ETIs (Enterprise Transformation Initiatives), 115, 123
 Ettl, Markus, 47 events, reducing time to detect aberrant, 113-114 evolution of roles, ISC, 34 expand mandate, 67 expenses, development of, 99-105 Expertise, 13

F

Fab PowerOps, 110 fabrication facilities, 109-111
 Facebook, 6
 Faces, 72. See also applications faster client response times, 147
 Ferrar, Jonathon, 24, 29-30
 Finance Leadership Advocacy Group, 54
 Finance transformation, 52 financial value, enabling, 51-52
 balancing risk/rewards, 59, 61
 creating cultures, 53, 55
 managing efficiency, 55-59
 validating acquisition strategies, 62, 64
 first in, first out rule, 109
 FLAG (Finance Leadership Advocacy Group), 54
 Fleming, Martin, 123
Forbes Insight, 84
 forecasting, 5, 57, 158-159
 four in the box purchasing models, 131
 FPO (Fab PowerOps), 110
 France, SWG, 128

Franz Edelman Award, 123
 Funding, 13 funding models, 30 future anticipating balancing risk/rewards, 59-61
 creating cultures, 53-55
 enabling financial value, 51-52
 Finance transformation, 52
 managing efficiency, 55-59
 validating acquisition strategies, 62-64
 of Finance, 64 state of analytics, 160 cognitive computing, 163
 growth of data, 160
 unstructured data, 161-163

G

GAAP (Generally Accepted Accounting Principles), 58
 Gantt charts, 110
 GBS (Global Business Services), 140, 147
 Generally Accepted Accounting Principles, 58
 George, Bill, 101
 Global Business Services, 140, 147
 Global Delivery Excellence, 148
 Global Technology Services, 140
 Globally Integrated Enterprise Shared Services, 11
 governance, 10-12, 46, 73-74
 graphs, relationships, 162 gross profits, predicting, 142 growth, 3 acquisition strategies, 62-64 of data, 160 maximum revenue, 124-126 retaining resources, 25
 GTS (Global Technology Services), 140

H hard measurements, 29

 hardware, modernizing, 69
 Hardware Product Management Transformation, 115-116
 Haren, Pierre, 110
 Haye, Donnie, 33-34, 45-46
 Hayes, Peter, 52 heavy equipment maintenance, 157 Hermiz, Keith, 92

high-value resources, retaining, 25 Hill, David, 35 hiring, market-related analytics, 84 holistic view of development expense, 99-105
 Horan, Jeanette, 67, 73
 HPMT (Hardware Product Management Transformation), 115-116
 HR (human resources), 15, 99-100 hubs, 163
 Hugo, Victor, 159 human resources, 15, 99-100

I

iBAT (IBM Buy Analysis Tool), 36-40, 47
 IBM Enterprise Marketing Management (EMM) Automation Project, 88
 IBM
 Global Business Services, 140-141, 143-148
 Global Technology Services, 140-143, 145
 ILOG, 110-111
 Institute of Business Value, 9, 12-13
 QRadar Security Intelligence Platform, 71
 Research, 22, 39
 SPSS Modeler, 104
 IBV (Institute for Business Value), 131
 IFRS (International Finance Reporting Standards), 58
 ILOG, 110-111
 implementation, 35 incentives, 46 incidents, detecting security, 71 information. See also data agenda, 73-74
 sharing, 163
 Information Technology Services, 141 information technology. See IT Information Week, 39 infrastructures, 76 infusion, 24 inside sales, 130-131. See also sales performance insights, employees, 27
 Institute for Business Value, 131 Institute for Supply Management, 39
 integer programming, 160
 Integrated Enterprise Operations Management, 47 Integrated Supply Chain, 33-34, 36
 Intellectual Property Licensing, 154

International Finance Reporting Standards, 58 intuition, 9 inventory, managing, 39-41 investments, optimal sales coverage by accounts, 128-130
 invoices, segmentation, 42
 ISC (Integrated Supply Chain), 33-34, 36
 ISM (Institute for Supply
 Management), 39
 IT (information technology), 15 detecting security incidents, 71
 enabling, 67-70
 transformation, 71, 74, 77

J-K

Jeopardy!, 123, 163
 Jonas, Jeff, 1, 7 journeys nine, 14 themes, 15-17
 Kadochnikov, Nick, 97-98, 102
 Karsan, Rudy, 23-24
 Kavanaugh, James, 51, 54
 Kenexa, 23-24
 KPIs (key performance indicators), 75

L

Leading Innovator Award, 39 leverage, 30
 analytics, 122-123
 leveraging the levers, 66 mandate, 67
 the nine levers of differentiation, 47 services, 139-141
 Lewis, Michael, 2 linear programming, 160
 Long-Term Signings, 141-142
 Loughridge, Mark, 55
 LTS (Long-Term Signings), 141
 Lupushor, Stela, 29

M

M&C Labs, 84
 MacDonald, Randy, 21, 24, 26, 30 maintenance of heavy equipment, 157 managing, 22
 efficiency, 55-56, 58-59
 inventory, 39-41

 optimizing, 98
 performance, 87-89 products, 107-108 Manganaris, Stefanos, 90
 manufacturing applying analytics to, 107-108
 enhancing yield, 111-113
 reducing time to detect aberrant events, 113-114 scheduling processes in semiconductor fabrication facilities, 109-111
 simplifying portfolios, 115-116
 MAP (Market Alignment Program),
 122-126

Market Alignment Program, 122-126
 marketing

 actions, 90
 automating, 89
 efficiency, 88
 performance management, 87-89
 Markov Decision Process, 42 mathematical optimization, 160 Mathematical Sciences Department in IBM Research, 3
 Mauri, Ross, 36, 93
 maximum growth revenue, 124-126
 MDP (Markov Decision Process), 42 Measurement, 13 measurements confidence, 157 development expenses, 99-105 hard, 29 leveraging, 30 progress, 13 of ROI, 25 skilled workforces, 97-98 soft, 29

Mergers and Acquisitions Analytics project, 62, 66 methods, forecasting, 158-159 Meyerson, Bernard, 111 micro-blogs, 6 Microelectronics Division and ILOG, 109 microprocessors, 112 mining, data, 111

 MIT Sloan, 12 mobile communications, 11 models, simulation, 156
 modernizing servers, 69-70
Moneyball: The Art of Winning an Unfair Game, 2 monitoring social media, 43-45

 Monte Carlo simulation, 69
 Moore, Geoffrey, 75 multi-channel, 86

N

NASA, 158
 NBA (Next Best Action), 36, 42, 47, 82 nearest to completion first rule, 109 networks, 76
 new business in services, developing, 141-142
 Next Best Action, 36, 42, 47 nine journeys, 14-17
 Norton, Maureen, 7, 154

O

O'Sullivan, Fran, 34, 42, 48 off-line analyses, 113 omni-channel, 86
 OMT (Optimal Matching Technology), 145-146
 online commerce, 130-131
 OnTarget, 122 opportunity to order, 34 Optimal Matching Technology, 145-146
 optimizing
 manufacturing applying analytics to, 107-108
 enhancing yield, 111-113
 reducing time to detect aberrant events, 113-114 scheduling processes in semiconductor fabrication facilities, 109, 111 simplifying portfolios, 115-116
 mathematical optimization, 160
 performance, 143, 146-147
 productivity, 38
 sales performance, 121-124
 B2B solutions, 132-135
 coverage by investment, 128-130
 deploying sellers, 124-128
 online commerce, 130-131
 supply chains applying to analytics, 33-36
 AR processes, 41-43 detecting quality problems early, 36-38 managing inventory, 39-41
 Supply Chain Listening project, 43-45
 workforces, 97-98

Otto, Nick, 129 outcomes client-focused business, 133 deployment of financial risk analytics, 143 Development Expense Baseline Project, 105
 productivity, 130, 147 reduction of hardware product portfolios, 116 revenue, 130
 sales performance, 126
 semiconductor fabrication processes, 111 signings, 142 territory performance, 127 timely intelligence to delivery teams, 148 outsourcing, 141

P

Palmisano, Sam, 100 partnerships, 25 PASIR (Predictive Analytics for Server Incident Reduction), 69 Passi, Carlos, 54 performance, 154. See also optimizing management, 87-89
 sales, 121. See also sales performance workforce, 143, 146-147 pioneer mandate, 68 pipeline, increasing, 142
 Plachy, Emily, 7, 154 Platform, 13 platforms, 73, 77 portfolios, simplifying product, 115-116 power outages, 44 predicting alerts, 157
 disruptions, 43-45 risk, 142-143
 predictive analytics, 5
 Predictive Analytics for Server Incident Reduction, 69
 preference data, 82 prescriptive analytics, 6 preventive maintenance, 158
 Price, Paul, 62 Problems, early warnings, 147-148 processes, 65
 AR, 41-43
 cash, 34 fabrication of semiconductors, 109-111 product management, analytics applying to, 107-108

 enhancing yield, 111-113
 reducing time to detect aberrant events, 113-114
 scheduling processes in semiconductor fabrication facilities, 109-111
 simplifying portfolios, 115-116 production, reducing times, 111 productivity, 130, 147, 163 collectors, 41-43
 optimizing, 38
 Professional Development Tool, 143
 Professional Marketplace, 143 profitability, 22, 142
 programming, 160 progress measurements, 13 projects
 design, 35
 Development Expense Baseline Project, 99, 104
 Development Productivity Indicators Project, 101
 Worldwide Spend, 55-56 protecting data about employees, 100 proven approaches, 12
 PureSystems, 128 push-down communication, 163

Q-R

QEWS (Quality Early Warning System), 36-37, 47
 QRadar, 71 qualitative data, 82 quality problems, detecting early, 36-38 quantitative data, 82 reactions, 76 readiness for change, 46 real estate management, 98
 Real Estate Planning and Facility Management, 154 recruitment, 21 reduction of returns, 41 production times, 111 time to detect aberrant events, 113-114 refresh servers, 70 relationships, 30 graphs, 162

replenishment, 39 reports, 5. See also descriptive analytics Corporate Executive Board Sales
 Leadership, 122
 Texas, 59
 Research division, 154 Resource Analytics Hub, 144 resources, retaining, 25 retention, employees, 58 return on investment. See ROI returns, reducing, 41 revenue, 142
 maximum growth, 124-126 outcomes, 130
 tracking, 103
 rewards, 59-61 risks, 59-61
 Country Financial Risk Scorecard, 59-61
 predicting, 142-143
 Rogers, Maria, 132
 ROI (return on investment), 7, 12, 99 measurement of, 25 roles, 22
 CIOs, 68
 evolution of ISC, 34 Rometty, Ginni, 1, 82 rules, manufacturing, 109

S

Said Business School at the University of Oxford, 9 Sales Coverage and Transformation, 126 sales organizations, leveraging analytics, 122-123 sales performance
 optimizing, 121-124
 B2B solutions, 132-135
 coverage by investment, 128-130
 deploying sellers, 124-128
 online commerce, 130-131
 sales, general, and administrative, 128 Sanford, Linda, 3, 9 scheduling processes in semiconductor fabrication facilities, 109-111
 SCIP (Strategy and Change Internal Practice), 132 security, 71-74
 SEE (Smarter Enterprise Enablement), 64
 segmenting invoices, 42

- Semiconductor International*, 111
 - semiconductors
 - aberrant events
 - reducing time to detect*, 113-114
 - simplifying portfolios*, 115-116
 - analytics, applying, 108
 - enhancing yields, 111-113
 - scheduling processes in fabrication facilities, 109-111
 - sentiment analysis, 29
 - servers
 - modernizing, 69-70
 - refresh, 70
 - services
 - analytics, 139-141
 - developing, 141-142
 - early problem warnings, 147-148
 - predicting risk, 142-143
 - workforce performance, 143-147
 - SG&A (sales, general, and administrative), 128
 - shortest processing time first rule, 109
 - signatures
 - aberration, 113
 - client experiences, 85-87
 - silos of data, 100
 - simplifying hardware product portfolios, 115-116
 - simulation, 156
 - Singer, Peter, 111
 - skills, 22
 - SKU (stock-keeping unit), 4
 - SMA (social media analytics), 73
 - Smarter Commerce Inside IBM, 123
 - smarter enterprise, 11
 - Smarter Enterprise Enablement, 64
 - Smarter Supply Chain Analytics, 34, 46
 - social media, 6, 11
 - development, 73
 - monitoring, 43-45
 - participation in, 29
 - tools, 8
 - social media analytics, 6, 26-29, 73
 - soft measurements, 29
 - software development organization, 97-98
 - Software group, 128
 - solution commercialization, 35
 - Source of Value, 13
 - SPC (Statistical Process Control), 37
 - spending tracking, 55-56
 - Sponsorship, 13
 - SPSS, 159
 - Spugani, Patricia, 131-132
 - SSCA (Smarter Supply Chain Analytics), 34, 46
 - Statistical Process Control, 37
 - statistics, 2
 - statutory environments, 59
 - STG (Systems and Technology Group), 39
 - stock-keeping unit, 4
 - Strategic Outsourcing Services, 141
 - strategies
 - acquisitions, 62-64
 - digital, 92-93
 - development, 35
 - invoice segmentation, 42
 - Strategy and Change Internal Practice, 132
 - strikes, 44
 - success, Mergers and Acquisitions
 - Analytics project, 63
 - Supply Chain Listening project, 43-45
 - Supply Chain Social Listening, 36
 - supply chains
 - analytics, 33-36
 - AR processes, 41-43
 - managing inventory, 39-41
 - quality problems, 36-38
 - simulation models, 156
 - Supply Chain Listening project, 43-45
 - supply demand visibility, 39-41
 - SWG (Software group), 128
 - Switzerland, 104
 - systematic cross-correlation of security
 - data, 71
 - Systems and Technology Group, 39
 - systems
 - of engagement, 8, 75
 - of record, 75
- T
- talent analytics, 21. See also workforces
 - taxes, reporting, 59
 - teams
 - development, 103
 - diversity of, 93
 - Tech Data 2010 Inventory Optimization
 - Partner of the Year award, 41
 - telesales, 130-131 territories, deploying sellers within, 126-128

Territory Optimization Program, 123, 127 testing devices, 108 themes, nine journeys, 15-17 time to detect aberrant events, reducing, 113-114
time-based data, 82
tools, 65
Country Financial Risk Scorecard, 59-61
social media, 8
TOP (Territory Optimization Program), 123, 127
Tracer Framework, 113 tracking revenue, 103
spending, 55-56 visibility, 43 transactional analytics, 85
transactional data, 155 transform mandate, 67 transformation, 65, 102
enabling, 68, 71, 74, 77
Finance, 52
journeys, 3
of sales organizations, 122 teams, 3 trends, quality, 37 Trust, 13 turnover, 23
Twitter, 6-8

U

U.S. Census Bureau, 104
UIMA (Unstructured Information Management Architecture), 162
University of Michigan, 39 University Relations team, 154 unstructured data, 161-163
up-to-date visibility, 39
use cases, 166-173
utilization, 43

V

validating acquisition strategies, 62-64 value of actions taken, 30 of analytics, 9 brands, 38 financial balancing risk/rewards, 59-61
creating cultures, 53-55
enabling, 51-52
managing efficiency, 55-59
validating acquisition strategies, 62-64
Value Services, 11 variability, 157 variety, 8, 28, 142 velocity, 8, 28, 37, 112 veracity, 8 video conferences, 54 visibility, tracking, 43 volume, 8, 28, 37, 39, 72, 112, 142
Volume and Velocity, 71

W-Z

wafers, 109. See also semiconductors Wallace, Marie, 75 warnings, early client problems, 147-148 Watson group, 164
Watson Jeopardy!, 72
Watson Sales Assistant, 72, 123, 164
Western Electric, 37
Wong, Chris, 82, 85, 87
Workforce Optimas Award, 147 workforces. See also employees analytics, 21, 24-25
management, 98
optimizing, 97-98
performance, 143, 146-147
retaining resources, 25
social analytics, 26-29
Worldwide Spend project, 55-56
Yashchin, Emmanuel, 36 yield, enhancing, 111-113

This page intentionally left blank

Try Safari Books Online FREE for 10 days

Get online access to Thousands of Books and Videos

Safari[®]
Books Online

FREE 10-DAY TRIAL
informit.com/safaritrial

Feed your brain

Gain unlimited access to thousands of books and videos about technology, digital media and professional development from O'Reilly Media, Addison-Wesley, Microsoft Press, Cisco Press, McGraw Hill, Wiley, WROX, Prentice Hall, Que, Sams, Apress, Adobe Press and other top publishers.

See it, believe it

Watch hundreds of expert-led instructional videos on today's hottest topics.

WAIT, THERE'S MORE!

Gain a competitive edge

Be first to learn about the newest technologies and subjects with Rough Cuts pre-published manuscripts and new technology overviews in Short Cuts.

Accelerate your project

Copy and paste code, create smart searches that let you know when new books about your favorite topics are available, and customize your library with favorites, highlights, tags, notes, mash-ups and more.

* Available to new subscribers only. Discount applies to the Safari Library and is valid for first 12 consecutive monthly billing cycles. Safari Library is not available in all countries.

Adobe Press

Cisco Press

O'REILLY

PEARSON
IT Certification

SAMS

vmware PRESS

